President's Word Waited On Revival of Offices Bill

Plan to Resurrect It Is Met With Chill by Congressmen.

Spending Hearing Scheduled Today

Hopkins and Ickes Slated as Witnesses Before Senate Committee.

An attempted revival of the President's Government reorganization project was making little headway yesterday, it was reported, as leaders waited to see whether Mr. Roosevelt at his conference with Congressional aids today will definitely seek such a revival.

Little enthusiasm was shown for the proposal on Capitol Hill, it was said, where informal polls were under way to ascertain how many vote shifts could be counted on should it be determined to press the issue.

"Why Bring That Up?"

Chairman James F. Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, of the Senate Reorganization Committee, who led the successful reorganization fight in that chamber, reiterated that he knew nothing of the movement to take up the matter again.

Chairman John J. Cochran (Democrat), of Missouri, of the House committee, said he had not even heard of the polls being taken and indicated disapproval of the undertaking by commenting: "Why bring all that up now?"

House Floor Leader Rayburn (Democrat), of Texas, though he said that "if we get the bill up it will pass," displayed doubt as to success of the movement.

Senate to Get Recovery Bill.

From other sources it was learned that an insufficient number of switched votes had been assured to justify an attempted comeback for the bill, especially in view of the insistent drive for adjournment and release of the members to get to their election campaigning.

The bill passed by the Senate was recommitted by the House, 204 to 196, on April 8.

Meanwhile, this week will see the President's spending-lending recovery program taken up on the Senate side, following its passage by the House on Thursday. The Senate Appropriations Committee will open hearings on the bill today, with Relief Administrator Hopkins and PWA Administrator Ickes as witnesses. Senator Adams (Democrat), of Colorado, heads the subcommittee to hold hearings.

The Senate itself will be engaged in debate on the McCarran bill creating a Federal agency to control civil aviation, and there were indications of hot fighting over the measure. Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, incensed at adoption of an amendment to give the President power ot remove members of the agency, has threatened to have his name removed as author of the bill.

Roosevelt Bid To Win Back Liberals Seen

Observers Vision Deal in La Follette's Inclusion on River Cruise.

Speculation was active in the Capital last night on possible political significance of the week-end river cruise on which President Roosevelt had as guests Senator Robert M. La Follette (Progressive), of Wisconsin, and Theodore F. Green (Democrat), of Rhode Island.

The fact that Mr. Roosevelt had invited Senator La Follette, who with his brother, Gov. Philip La Follette of Wisconsin, recently announced formation of a new political party was taken in some circles as evidence of a desire to win back support of some progressive elements to whom the new party might appeal.

In this connection it was pointed out that the Wisconsin Senator now is seeking an additional appropriation of $60,000 with which to continue investigations and hearings by his Civil Liberties Committee. A measure carrying the appropriation has been reported out by the Senate Committee on Audit and Control, but without recommendation, and there have been reports of strong undercover efforts to prevent its passage. There was some speculation last night on whether, in view of the new political developments, there might be Administration support given for the appropriation.

Earle Leading, 2 to 1, for Senate on Eve of Vote Tomorrow.

By Dr. George Gallup,
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

New York, May 15.—Sampling of public opinion in Pennsylvania in the last week indicates that intra-party races in the Democratic and Republican primaries Tuesday may be extremely close.

The institute has not conducted a regular election poll in Pennsylvania, and its sampling has not been wide enough to justify definite predictions as to who will win. The primaries have been studied, however, as part of the institute's weekly surveys throughout the United States, in which a share of ballots come from Pennsylvania.

The present sampling ballot was completed Saturday and represents middle-of-the-week sentiment.

Jones, Kennedy Even.

In the Democratic gubernatorial race it showed Charles Alvin Jones and Lieut. Gov. Thomas Kennedy neck-and-neck, with former Attorney General Margiotti third. For the Democratic senatorial nomination it showed Gov. George H. Earle leading Mayor S. Davis Wilson, of Philadelphia, by almost 2 to 1.

On the Republican side, the sampling showed Judge Arthur H. James and Gifford Pinchot almost exactly even in the race for the Republican Governorship nomination and Senator James J. Davis leading National Committeeman G. Mason Owlett by about 4 to 1 for the senatorial nomination.

The institute found the situation in Pennsylvania extremely confused. Many voters did not recognize the names of the candidates and a great many more—almost one-fourth of all voters—did not have definite convictions about how they would vote.

Lewis the Major Issue.
By the United Press.

Philadelphia, May 15.—Pennsylvania's turbulent primary campaign drew to a close tonight with John L. Lewis' bid for political control of the Nation's second largest State the major issue in a bitter race which shattered the New Deal front.

Lieut. Gov. Thomas Kennedy, secretary-treasurer of the United Mine Workers of America, C. I. O. cradle and source of Lewis' financial strength in last summer's battle against "Little Steel," tonight predicted a 100,000 vote victory margin for his C. I. O. slate in Tuesday's primary.

Gov. George H. Earle, "regular" party candidate for Senator and leader of the forces opposing Kennedy, anticipated victory by 300,000 votes. Former Attorney General Charles J. Margiotti, ousted by Gov. Earle after he charged that the Administration was guilty of graft, said today that the Administration also received $100,000 for permitting Sunday movies in the State and predicted a plurality of 150,000 votes for himself.

The Committee for Industrial Organization candidate for governor, with tacit support of the Washington Administration, is aligned against a "regular" party slate

Paris, May 15.—Government circles tonight said France's plan to send a fully accredited Ambassador to Rome without waiting for formal conclusion of an Italo-French pact of friendship ought to be abandoned as a result of Premier Mussolini's speech of warning to democracies at Genoa.

Il Duce's statement that it might be difficult to restore friendship with France because the two nations were "on opposite sides of the barricades in the Spanish war" failed, however, to break down French determination to achieve a friendship pact before the end of this month.

The foreign office spokesman answered Mussolini with the statement that France was "on neither side of the Spanish barricade" but to the contrary, invented and still pursued the policy of nonintervention which Britain and France de-

Crowd Looks On As Bear at Zoo Murders Peacock

There was murder at the Zoo yesterday.

Nearly 50 spectators stood helplessly by when the Zoo's lone peacock came within reach of the mighty paw of Snowy, the polar bear—and was finished off, just like that.

The peacock was walking on the parapet behind the bear cage when he "slipped or flew" onto the floor of the cage. "He probably thought Snowy was just a big white rock," sadly commented Sergt. L. A. Tabinski, of the Zoo police.

The bear's blow took off the peacock's entire tail. After a brief chase around the cage, it was all over.

"This may be a healthy lesson for the public," observed Tabinski. "It shows just how ferocious these bears are."

Coast Guard Saves 7 as 3 Die in Storm

Boston, May 15 (U.P.).—A strong southeast gale whipping the North Atlantic took three lives as a Coast Guard cutter's crew saved seven men from a sinking vessel off the Maine coast tonight.

John Phillips, 50, exhausted after drifting ashore on a cabin roof, reported to Coast Guard at Gay Head, Martha's Vineyard, the drowning of his son Clarence, Anton Joseph, 45, another seaman and his brother Domingo, 47, when his fishing boat capsized.

Coast Guardsmen of the cutter Algonquin took aboard their ship the seven-man crew of the battered British schooner Stuart T. Salter, 39 miles southeast of Portland, Me., lightship. The Algonquin radioed it would stand by the sinking vessel until morning.

San Luis Potosi, Mexico, May 15. Government troops took possession of four church rooftops and mounted antiaircraft guns there today as tension mounted in fear of an outbreak by Gen. Saturnino Cedillo's armed agrarians.

Detachments were stationed atop the strategically located churches, while an antiaircraft unit was set up at a principal street corner and guards patrolled public buildings of the state capital under virtual martial law.

Though there was no word of disorders throughout the state northwest of Mexico City, the stringent military precautions heightened alarm of San Luis Potosi citizens.

3,000 Wait in Barracks.

Three thousand troops were held in barracks here. Five thousand more were scattered out through the long, strategically important state of which this city is the capital.

Garrisons were heavily reinforced around the Las Palomas estate of Cedillo, the "strong man of San Luis Potosi" and President Lazaro Cardenas' opponent since his resignation last August as minister of agriculture.

Cedillo meanwhile remained at Las Palomas, ill enough for a physician's care but not confined to his bed. He was surrounded by sturdy peasants he thrice led in civil warfare.

To those peasants, estimated to number from 18,000 to 35,000, he has given land and guns.

Peasants Refuse Surrender.

Leaders of the agricultural colonies he carved out of his once spacious estate have said they would yield neither soil nor arms without a fight.

McIntyre, Bridge Expert, Arrested In Gaming Raid

William C. McIntyre, 26, one of the ranking bridge players in the country, and Mrs. Rosamund Clarke, 35, were arrested on gaming charges early yesterday after a raid on a fashionable apartment in the 1800 block Sixteenth street northwest.

Present at the apartment, unknown to the habitues, were a rookie policeman and an attractive young policewoman. The men entered a 50-cent limit poker game; the woman played bridge.

Then a raiding squad, led by Detective Sergeant Roy Blick, acting on a United States Commissioner's warrant, walked into the rooms.

Although the warrant, sworn out after complaints had been received from neighbors, named only Mrs. Clarke, McIntyre was arrested as well. Both were charged at the Third Precinct Station and released after furnishing $300 bail each.

Navy Plane With 6 Forced Onto Sea

Miami, May 15 (U.P.).—A United States Navy patrol bombing plane, one of 13 flying from the Canal Zone to Norfolk, made a forced landing in the Atlantic 140 miles northeast of here when it ran out of fuel.

The bomber, with a crew of six, became separated from the squadron in a fog over Cuba when its voice radio transmitter failed. It made the forced landing safely alongside the S. S. City Service Toledo, which communicated a report to the Coast Guard base here.

The 12 other planes of the squadron landed here and the one which made the forced landing joined the squadron after refueling from two seaplanes from the Coast Guard air base here.

Solomon's Seaport Uncovered By U.S. Scientists on Red Sea

By the Associated Press.

New Haven, Conn., May 15.—King Solomon's seaport on a northern reach of the Red Sea, a flourishing city of trade and industry in Biblical days of nearly 3,000 years ago, has been discovered by American archeologists.

Prof. Millar Burrows, of Yale University, president of the American School of Oriental Research, today announced an expedition, sponsored by the American Philosophical Society and headed by Nelson Glueck, of the American School of Oriental Research in Jerusalem, had excavated the port, exact location of which was unknown until recently.

The site, Dr. Burrows said, now known to the Arabs as Tell Elkheleifeh, is at the northern end of the Gulf of Aqaba, eastern arm of the Red Sea.

"The Bible notes in connection with the splendor of Solomon's reign," the Yale professor said, "that with the help of Hiram, King of Tyre, he built a fleet of ships at Ezion-Geber which is beside Eloth

Japan Traps 200,000.
By the United Press.

Shanghai (Monday), May 16.—Mechanized Japanese columns have smashed into the environs of Suchow, key city in Gen. Chiang Kai-shek's fortified line along the Lunghai Railway defending his provisional capital in Hankow, a Japanese army spokesman reported today.

Suchow, where the north-south Tientsin-Pukow Railway crosses the east-west Lunghai line, was completely encircled, and the Japanese believed about 200,000 Chinese soldiers were trapped and would be killed or captured.

Gen. Li Tsung-jen, Chinese commander, was believed to have fled westward, leaving behind about half the 400,000 men he led in the Suchow area last week.

The Japanese cut the Lunghai line at three points and crossed the Yellow River west of Suchow. Bombing planes were raining death on the Chinese all along the 200 miles of the Lunghai line from Haichow, on the sea, to Tungkwan, where the Yellow River bends northward to form a border between Shensi and Shansi provinces.

Chinese dispatches said more than 800 civilians were killed in continuous bombings of Suchow throughout Saturday and Sunday. Military casualties were not revealed.

"Many fires are burning in the city," the Chinese Central News Agency reported. "All fire-fighting equipment is out of commission. The population is fleeing into the countryside. More than 280 big bombs hit the city Saturday. The French Catholic Mission, telephone and telegraph offices, schools, the power plant, banks, hotels, newspaper offices and hospitals were damaged. All railway traffic is cut off."

Four Japanese armies, split into 16 columns, participated in the final drive on Suchow, culminating a campaign which had been under way intermittently since last January.

First Lady's Letter Opens Airmail Week

(Pictures on Pages 4 and 8.)

Surrounded by aviation enthusiasts, stamp collectors and sightseers, Mrs. Roosevelt yesterday inaugurated National Airmail Week by posting a letter from a huge "sky-sleeper" parked at Fourteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue, to her daughter, Mrs. John Boettiger, in Seattle.

District Postmaster Vincent C. Burke presented her with the first sheet of the new red and blue airmail stamps. In accepting the gift Mrs. Roosevelt smiling said she did so "for my husband, because I don't think I'd be allowed to retain them, since he will want them for his collection."

Perry Morrison, Arcadia (Calif.) High School student, last night was awarded a trip to Miami as winner of the National Air Mail Week essay contest at a dinner held at the Mayflower Hotel.

Runners-up were Ellen Peak, of Manhattan, Kans., who received a bronze and silver trophy, and Homer Still, jr., of Jacksonville, Fla., who was presented with a silver plaque.

The awards were made by Chairman Thomas W. Bird of the essay contest committee in the absence of the other two judges, Prof. Roland H. Spaulding, of New York, and Robert W. Hambrook, of Washington.

During the afternoon an Eastern transport liner landed at Washington Airport after an 80-minute trip from New York, commemorating the

D. C. Chinese Toss $1,500 to 'War Dragon'

(Other Pictures on Page 8.)

In a spatter of firecrackers and triple rhythm of drums, gongs and cymbals, Washington's Chinese ceremonial dragon yesterday wove through H street in a war dance that was old 1,000 years ago.

Yesterday the dragon's dance was a hunger march, and its huge flapping mouth found good feeding along the windows of Chinatown's shops and the front doors of its homes, where patriotic Chinese had hung the savings that will go to help their brothers fight at home.

The dragon hunted through the streets twice, and behind him marched eight Chinese women carrying their flag. Into the flag went more money, thrown from the higher windows. And when the dance was over the friends of the dragon found more than $1,500 ready to go to China.

They found this long after the dragon and war games were over, after the drummer had worn a hole in the drum head beating the triple rhythm, and the feet of the dancing girls had grown tired.

While this went on and the spirit of victory was in the air, Chinese defenders of Suchow were suffering one of the major setbacks of the undeclared war in China. Battered by mechanized Japanese columns, 200,000 troops of Chiang Kai-shek were reported in retreat, and 200,000 trapped.

The dragon's dance slowed for a moment after his second tour, and as he paused the crowd of more than 1,000 gathered in a circle

City Needs 5 Judges to Bring Calendar Up to Date, Says Pine

Pointing out that Washington's criminal calendar had been reduced materially since January 1, District Attorney David A. Pine declared last night that "if we had five, instead of three judges, we could bring the calendar up to date by the end of the month."

The District attorney said crime in the District had been decreasing, "taking the number of indictments returned in the last two months as a barometer." He said the reduction was marked especially in the armed robbery, housebreaking and gambling divisions.

Pine said the 629 felony indictments pending at the first of the year had dropped to "about 230," despite the "hundreds" of indictments added in the intervening five months.

"We have been giving preference on the calendar to robbery and housebreaking cases," the District attorney said, "because crimes of that type are planned. In speeding up action on robberies and housebreakings, we may prevent many such crimes in the future."

Pine attributed the small number

Roosevelt Praises Drive to Aid China

A letter from President Roosevelt to Chairman Norman H. Davis, of the American Red Cross, conveying Presidential approval of the million-dollar campaign to aid Chinese war sufferers was made public yesterday.

"It is my belief," Mr. Roosevelt wrote the Red Cross head, "that when the appalling and increasing distress of those innocent sufferers is made known to the American people they will desire to contribute, within their means, to meet this pressing humanitarian need."

Contributions to date amount to $170,000, with an additional $200,000 voted from the Red Cross treasury.

AAA Attempts To Keep Wheat Aid 'in Reason'

Growers Told High Loans Would Destroy Good Foreign Market.

By the Associated Press.

The Agricultural Adjustment Administration carried to wheat farmers yesterday a plea that they accept a "reasonable" rate for forthcoming Government loans on wheat to avoid possible loss of foreign markets for the grain.

The AAA took it for granted that a loan program would have to be inaugurated by harvest time. Loans are authorized by the new crop-control law when crop prospects exceed normal domestic and export needs or the price drops below 52 per cent of the parity price of $1.15 a bushel.

Present prospects point to the second largest winter wheat crop on record and a supply for the coming marketing year of at least 400,000,000 bushels more than normal needs.

Maximum Rate 86 Cents.

The law gives the AAA authority to set the loan rate at between 60 and 86 cents a bushel, on the basis of present prices.

Anticipating protests from wheat growers if the rate were fixed below the maximum, the AAA sent officials into the winter wheat belt of the Midwest and the soft wheat region of the Pacific Northwest to plead in advance for acceptance of a rate below that figure.

They carried this advice to the growers:

"During the period in which high loans are made, exports are retarded and surpluses pile up. The piling up of surpluses within the United States tends to reduce prices during following seasons.

"Prices supported by high loan rates would give the appearance of a better market than really exists and farmers may continue to seed more than they would if loans were not holding prices above the world market levels. This would serve to increase the surplus and to lead to an even more injurious price decline."

The export market has been a good outlet in the current marketing year for surplus wheat produced last year. Sales abroad in the last ten months have amounted to about 75,000,000 bushels. AAA officials predicted, however that foreign markets would be lost if the domestic price were pegged above world levels by a high rate loan.

75-Cent Rate Indicated.

Officials have given no indication of what they think a "reasonable" rate should be. Presumably, it would be no greater than the average farm price at the time the loan program was started. Loans on such a basis, officials have said in the past, enable farmers to hold their grain and prevent a price-demoralizing rush to market.

Officials said they expected great pressure from farmers for a maximum rate, inasmuch as the difference between a 75 and an 86-cent loan would mean more than $100,000,000 in immediate cash return to growers, on the basis of a 950,000,000-bushel harvest.

Officials who will address meetings of wheat growers are George E. Farrell, director of the Western division of the AAA, and E. J. Bell, economist for that division. Farrell will speak in the Northwest and Bell in Kansas.

Committee for Industrial Organization, which said in the latest issue of its news publication:

"Write to your senator at once urging him to vote for the full appropriation." It charged that "reactionary employer interests are actively lobbying to put the committee out of business."

Other support came for the measure last night from E. L. Oliver, executive vice president of Labor's Non-Partisan League, who wrote to members of the Senate saying:

"The work of no committee in recent years has been of more profound importance, not only to labor but to all citizens who cherish our democratic rights."

Blocking Tactics Cited.

"The investigations and hearings conducted by Senators La Follette of Wisconsin and Thomas of Utah and their staff since passage of the Senate Resolution 266 on June 6, 1937, have disclosed both the brutal tactics of employers, typified by armed thugs and industrial espionage, and the subtle methods of the National Association of Manufacturers and its affiliated organizations. The latter seek their objective of blocking labor organization and otherwise suppressing civil rights through so-called citizens' committees and public relations counsel.

"This organization, representing labor and labor sympathizers throughout the country, would consider it a calamity if the La Follette committee's application is not approved by your body."

Addison Warns of Trade Loss Unless Tax Rate Is Watched

FRANCIS G. ADDISON.

New President of Board of Trade Says Businesses Will Shift Across District Line When It Is to Their Economic Advantage.

By Christine Sadler.

Unless the Washington tax rate is watched closely and fiscal relations between the District of Columbia and the Federal Government can be straightened out, the District must count on losing some of its business establishments to neighboring suburbs, warns Francis G. Addison, jr., new president of the Board of Trade.

"When it is to the economic advantage of businesses to shift across the District line, they are going to do it," he says.

A tax advantage, coupled with the suffrage advantage, which outlying areas already possess, he cautions, would be a powerful attraction that new establishments able to operate away from the downtown section could not afford to overlook.

"That is exactly why the Board of Trade must keep the tax situation first in its mind, and must know what any proposed improvement is going to do to the tax burden before it supports it," he says. "That is why, too, we must continue our efforts to persuade the Federal Government to assume a more equitable portion of the cost of operating the District."

"Indications are that expenses in most of the District classifications have been increasing out of proportion to the increase in population.

"The per capita cost of education and the per capita cost of paying for policemen and firemen have been going up. We do not advocate stopping these services, but we do believe that it may be possible to coordinate efforts of the various District departments in such a way that expenses can be reduced.

"Perhaps not, but the possibilities should be studied and the complete picture given—in order that we can see what ought to be done."

Addison's recent promotion to the presidency of the board, from the first vice presidency, is but another civic feather in his cap. He has been one of the District's outstanding business and civic leaders for a number of years.

He is a past chairman of the Better Business Bureau and a past president of the District of Columbia Bankers Association. He is a member of the executive committee of the American Bankers Association, in the State bank division, and a member of the Greater National Capital Committee, of which he is former treasurer.

He is greatly interested in the work of the latter committee and says there is no doubt about visitors being the second biggest business in Washington, ranking next to the Government itself.

"And it is one business," he says, "that needs only publicity to keep it going. The natural attractions of Washington are such that little else is required. A new auditorium, of course, would help."

An auditorium large enough to accommodate the biggest conventions of the Nation, and a suitable airport are projects Addison is inclined to put first.

"But they should both be Federal projects," he points out. "The taxpayers of the District should not be expected to build them, nor should they have to maintain the auditorium after it is built."

Addison's main job is being president of the Security Savings & Commercial Bank. His principal hobbies are golf and hunting. A native of Prince Georges County, he has been a District resident since 1904 and thinks it a slur on the intelligence and ability of Washingtonians that they are not permitted to vote. The argument that the District is better off as it is does not strike him as being one that holds water. He is the father of a 14-year-old son, who is a student at St. Alban's.

On Wednesday—Robert J. Cottrell, executive secretary of the Board of Trade, will be next in the "Working for Washington" series.

Norris Embroiled In Oregon Battle

Portland, Oreg., May 15 (AP).—Senator George W. Norris, of Nebraska, entered the fight over the Democratic gubernatorial nomination in Oregon today with an indorsement of the candidacy of Henry Hess and an attack on Gov. Charles H. Martin, who seeks re-election.

The Norris statement, released by Hess, said Martin had disappointed the hopes of those who had believed him to be "a true liberal" and urged "the farmers of Oregon in particular" to vote for Hess at Friday's primary election.

The development followed closely a White House denial Saturday that President Roosevelt, on a visit to Oregon last fall, had told the Governor that "you and I made a good pair."

Hess was quick to make capital of the denial, issued by Stephen Early, the President's secretary, as indicating Martin was not in the favor of the Administration.

"In this primary election I am carrying the banner of the President," Hess stated.

The Eugene Register-Guard, rallying to the Governor's defense, said today it had verified from men who helped make the arrangements that Martin's recent radio address praising the Administration spending program was made at the request of the radio director of the Democratic National Committee and with the understanding it was "the President's wish."

The newspaper said the Governor's friends cited the incident "in rebuttal to the White House statement Saturday indicating that the President had disclaimed friendly inclinations toward the Oregon Governor . . ." Martin, the newspaper said, remained silent on the ground that "you cannot have arguments with the President."

Martin, who has publicly criticized the Natianal Labor Relations Board and Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins, has been subjected throughout the campaign to the accusation of being against the New Deal.

James, who bases his campaign on the need for a new broom in the capital, against twice-Governor Gifford Pinchot, whose opponents charge that he is John L. Lewis' "backstop" in the event Kennedy loses the Democratic nomination.

A victory for the labor slate headed by Kennedy would be regarded as deliverance to Lewis of 72 Pennsylvania votes for a possible C. I. O. candidate in the next Democratic National Convention.

Earle's Forces Rebuffed.

The closing hours of the campaign brought charges from Senator Joseph F. Guffey (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, boss of the "regulars" until he quarreled with them and switched to the Kennedy camp, that Gov. Earle is attempting to "steal" the election in Philadelphia. Then came a warning by United States Attorney J. Cullen Ganey that the polls would be closely watched by Federal officers and that complaints of irregularities would be received by him at the Wilson-Kennedy headquarters here.

While President Roosevelt and National Chairman James A. Farley have refused support to the Lewis faction—the President referring questioners to Dante's "Inferno" for his opinion of the Pennsylvania quarrel—Earle's forces have been repeatedly rebuffed in party squabbles which required arbitration by high party leaders.

Moreover, WPA Administrator Harry Hopkins today thanked Kennedy for "grand" work in Pennsylvania WPA and indicated that Kennedy's recent request for a larger WPA allocation was regarded favorably.

President William Green of the American Federation of Labor, while withholding his support from any candidate, has conducted a bitter personal campaign against Kennedy, charging that he is a "Charley McCarthy" speaking words dictated by Lewis.

Observers regarded Lewis' entry into the campaign as a bold step to establish a political fulcrum for new efforts to increase the power of the C. I. O. nationally.

Pension Backers Indorsed.

By the United Press.

The General Welfare Federation of America, Inc., last night indorsed nine Democratic and two Republican Representatives for renomination in the Pennsylvania primaries tomorrow because of "their stand on a uniform National old-age pension act."

They are Representatives Michael J. Stack, Don Gingery, Peter J. Demuth, Robert G. Allen, Ira W. Drew, Harry L. Haines, Charles R. Eckert, Guy L. Moser and Charles N. Crosby, all Democrats, and Alfred G. Rutherford and Benjamin Jarrett, Republicans.

The indorsement said that all had appealed to the House Ways and Means Committee to release the Crosby bill, a streamlined version of the Townsend $200-a-month old-age pension measure, and all except Haines, Drew, Eckert and Moser had signed a petition to discharge the committee from further consideration of the proposal so that it can reach the House floor.

Rep. Plumley to Talk.

Representative Charles A. Plumley, of Vermont, will speak at 8 p. m. tomorrow at the 300th meeting of the Columbia Historical Society at the Mayflower Hotel. Plumley formerly was president of Norwich University at Northfield, Vt.

Tinkham Hits Administration Foreign Policy

Charges Accord Approval Was 'Instigated' by Great Britain.

President Roosevelt's statement of April 19, praising negotiation of the Italian-British accord, arose again yesterday to bring a new attack on the Administration's foreign policy.

Amid the delicate situation created by severance of British-Mexican relations over expropriation of foreign-owned oil properties in Mexico, and the general question of British-American co-operation in foreign affairs, Representative George H. Tinkham (Republican), of Massachusetts, declared the President's approval was given "at the instigation of the British foreign office.

In a statement he said the assertion had been made and not denied "that a member of the British cabinet sent a letter to the President or the State Department urging such approval. Declaring that if the statement is true "the President is under a grave delusion," he added:

"The course which he pursued in this instance is what would be expected of a high commissioner of a British mandated territory, the governor of a British crown colony, or the governor general of a British dominion."

He declared further:

"The President's approval, at the dictation of the British foreign office, of British action in relation to the conquest of Ethiopia, is a complete repudiation of our traditional foreign policy of noninterference in European affairs. It is also a complete reversal by the President of the position he took in his speech at Chicago on October 5 last, in which he tore into shreds the neutrality act passed by the Congress and signed by himself only a few months before. In his Chicago speech, he called for 'a concerted effort to uphold laws and principles on which alone peace can rest secure,' denounced 'definite violations of agreements and especially of the Covenant of the League of Nations and the Briand-Kellogg pact,' and called upon the world to 'quarantin' recalcitrant nations . . .

"The President is following precisely the course in foreign affairs that led the United States on to the bloody fields of Europe in 1917. His constant projection of the United States into European politics and European conflicts create commitments, moral if not actual, which will inevitably lead this country into the next great war in Europe."

British, U. S. Diverge.

By the Associated Press.

Great Britain and the United States have broken in three important places in the last 60 days their parallel lines of foreign policy, political observers noted yesterday.

All three fractures have occurred since Secretary of State Hull said in a speech to the National Press Club on March 17:

"Prudence and common sense dictate that, where this and other nations have common interests and common objectives, we should not hesitate . . . to proceed along parallel lines."

It was widely believed that Hull had in mind Great Britain and France particularly.

Whatever co-operation there since has been between John Bull and Uncle Sam—and some Administration critics contend it has been considerable — the two countries have pursued different courses in these three respects:

Britain and the United States diagree over the tonnage of superbattleships. Britain wants 42,000-ton ships; the United States, 45,000-tonners.

Britain is throwing overboard the policy of nonrecognition of conquered territory and is about to recognize Italian Ethiopia. The United States, through Secretary Hull, vigorously reaffirmed Thursday this country's determination not to recognize conquered territory.

The American and British approaches in the Mexican oil expropriation controversy are utterly at variance. Uncle Sam has spoken softly, John Bull with fury.

French and American policy also has varied in several particulars recently.

Army Satisfied It Can Repulse Air Attacks, in Games Anyway

Defense Planes Could Destroy Good Portion of Invading Craft, Military Feels Sure; Maneuvers Will Be Over Tomorrow.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 15.—Army airmen have demonstrated—to their own satisfaction, at least—that given ample warning, they could destroy a good portion of the bombing fleet of any foreign power which tried to attack the United States.

Daily, since the start of the North Atlantic Seaboard war games by the General Headquarters Air Force the combat portion of the Army Air Corps has been assigned problems involving interception of "enemy" planes bent on air raids.

The increasing size and armament of bombers has tended to minimize the importance of the single-seater, high-speed pursuit plane as a defensive weapon during air raids. But experiments during the current war games, on the statement of the military umpires, have shown that pursuits could be deadly to raiders.

Such raiders necessarily would be launched from aircraft carriers with an enemy surface fleet, and, due to the mileage of their mission, could not be accompanied by protective combat planes.

Intelligence of the approach of raiders in daylight would be simple, officers of the G. H. Q. said today, but night raids would be more difficult to combat. More stealthy, night raids nevertheless would not present insurmountable problems.

Sunday was a day of rest for the 3,000 men engaged in the maneuvers, but promptly at midnight the pursuit, attack and bombing planes of the three "wings" into which the G. H. Q. is divided were scheduled to take wing to work on the final day's problems.

Bombardment planes of the first wing, with headquarters at New Haven, Conn., will bomb some old airplanes on Mulberry Island in Chesapeake Bay. Attack planes of the same wing will dive on simulated troop concentrations on Plum Tree Island.

Bombers and attack machines of the second wing, with headquarters at Middletown, Pa., will assault "Cargo vessels" tied up at Norfolk, Va., and "enemy" planes nesting at Langley Field; while the third wing, in the New York area, will intercept hostile bombers.

The "blackout" of Farmingdale, Long Island, to guard against an air attack, will occur tomorrow night, and a grand review of all combat planes will be held Tuesday to conclude the games.

Administration To Back Buying Of War Minerals

Sen. Thomas Sees Chance for Bill's Passage This Session.

By the Associated Press.

Administration backing appeared in prospect today for a proposal to authorize the Army and Navy to acquire and store up to $25,000,000 worth of minerals essential in wartime.

Experts of five Government departments drafted the bill offered Friday by Chairman Thomas (Democrat), of Utah, of the Senate's strategic war mineral committee, Thomas disclosed.

He said it was the result of a four-year study, and expressed belief there was a chance Congress would send it to the White House before the session ended.

'Provision for strategic and critical minerals is an essential part of our Navy expansion program and other efforts to build up the national defense," Thomas said.

The measure would empower the War and Navy departments to buy minerals for war which are available only by importation or by development of domestic sources. The purchases would be stored on military and naval reservations, to be used only in war-time or when the President decided a defense emergency existed.

The War Deparemnt lists 22 commodities as "strategic" because of entire or heavy dependence on foreign sources, and nine of these are minerals—aluminum, antimony, chromium, manganese, mica, nickel, mercury,, tin and tungsten. The Army has a secondary list also of "critical" materials.

Thomas said the Senate proposal would dovetail with the Navy's efforts to build up its stocks of such materials as silk, tin, manganese and chromium, for which it has spent more than half of a $3,000,000 appropriation Congress voted last year.

He emphasized that the development of domestic supplies, as well as thec reation of "piles" of imorted materials, was contemplated.

Lumber Firms Charged With Coercing Prices

F. T. C. Alleges Conspiracy by 24 Manufacturers in Northern States.

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Trade Commission yesterday charged 24 manufacturers with conspiring to fix prices of hardwood lumber produced in northern Michigan and northern Wisconsin.

The commission alleged the producers and their trade association, the Hardwood Institute, fixed and maintained uniform maximum discounts and terms of sale.

Coercion and threats of boycott were among the means used to enforce the alleged price-fixing, the commission asserted.

It alleged that the activities of the institute were directed by A. L. Osborn, Oshkosh, Wis., who was named a respondent.

The commission said respondent institute members in Michigan are: Antrim Iron Co., Grand Rapids; Bay de Noquet Co., Nahma; Brownlee Co., Detroit; Northwestern Cooperage & Lumber Co., Gladstone; Von Platen & Fox Co., Iron Mountain; Weidman Lumber Co., Trout Creek; I. Stephenson Co., Wells, and Wisconsin Land & Lumber Co., Hermansville.

Wisconsin members of the institute, the complaint said, are: William Boniface Lumber Co., Neenah; Holt Lumber Co., Oconto; Kinsel Lumber Co., Merrill; Marathon Paper Mills Co., Wausau; the M. J. Wallrich Land & Lumber Co., Shawano; Roddis Lumber & Veneer Co., Marshfield; Sawyer-Goodman Co., Marinette; Thunder Lake Lumber Co., Rhinelander; the Yawkey-Bissel Co., White Lake; the Yawkey-Alexander Lumber Co., Schofield; Menominee & Bay Shore Lumber Co., Soperton; the Oconto Co., Oconto; the Rib Lake Lumber Co., Rib Lake, and the Underwood Veneer Co., Wausau.

Other respondents, the Boniface Gorman Co. and the Edward Hines Lumber Co., which have headquarters in Chicago, are members of the institute, the complaint said.

Langdon Faces Limerick Death Charges Today

The murder trial of Robert F. Langdon, the policeman on the beat when Beulah Limerick was killed in her southeast Washington home seven years ago, will begin at 10 a. m. today before Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue in District Court.

Star prosecution witnesses are expected to be Donald E. Boyer, William V. Watts, a former policeman, and Robert H. Miller. They were uncovered after years of quiet work by Lieut. Floyd Truscott and Sergt. Earl Hartman.

Langdon will be defended by J. Russell Kelly and his brother, William Kelly. The prosecutor will be Assistant United States Attorney John J. Wilson.

Another witness will be Mrs. Rose Langdon, wife of the burly former policeman, who has been in seclusion under police protection in Washington almost a year.

Lieut. John H. Fowler, ballistics expert of the police department, will testify concerning the .25 caliber bullet which killed the 19-year-old party girl and a rusty gun which was dug up by a dog in the rear yard of her home years later.

Third Earthquake In Month Shakes Central Turkey

Ankara, Turkey, May 15 (AP).—Earthquakes shook central Turkey today for the third time within a month, sending the populace fleeing into fields in terror. The government announced there were three severe shocks but gave no estimate of casualties.

The Kirshehr area, 100 miles southeast of here, which virtually was razed last month, again suffered heavily.

In addition to Ankara, Turkey's capital, Eskishehr, Aksera, Sivas and the Diarbekir region, where more than 100 houses collapsed in the Lidja district alone, were affected.

200 Doctors, Diplomats Hear About Gun Wounds

More than 200 physicians and diplomats last night were guests of Dr. Custis Lee Hall at a meeting of the Pan-American Medical Association at Congressional Country Club. Dr. S. Castillo Najera presided.

"Gunshot Wounds of the Chest" were discussed by Dr. Carnes Weeks, attending surgeon, Bellevue Hospital, New York. Dr. Harry Wright, of Philadelphia, told of the "Quest of the Uros—Remnants of a Once Numerous Tribe."

William M. Neitzey, 77, a retired commission merchant, died Saturday at his home, 3800 Lee Boulevard, Arlington County. He leaves his wife, Mrs. Mary E. Neitzey; one son, Benjamin M. Neitzey, and three daughters, Mrs. Norman Shephard, of Accotink, and Mrs. John Haske and Mrs. James Madagan of Washington.

The funeral will be held on Wednesday at 3 p. m. from the home. Burial will be in Columbia Gardens, Arlington County.

Man Beaten, Robbed On Kalorama Road

Willis B. Graham, 24, of 1824 Eighteenth street northwest, was severely beaten and robbed of $210 last night by a lone colored footpad at Eighteenth street and Kalorama road northwest. Graham told police that the bandit stuck a hard object in his back and told him to put up his hands. Graham obeyed and then, seeing that the bandit didn't have a gun, started to resist. The bandit struck him, took his money and escaped in an automobile.

About 1,500 spectators, not to mention 155 riders and their mounts, braved cloudy skies and muddy ground yesterday for the National Capital Parks' spring horse show in Rock Creek Park. Despite treacherous footing, the show's eight classes—half of which were jumping events—were run off without a spill.

Stars of the featured open jumping class were Jeremiah, thoroughbred stallion owned by Mrs. Gladys Habelman, and his rider, young Eddie Talbot. The 4-year-old chestnut horse cleared every bar and was given a perfect score and the Irwin Loughlin Trophy for first place.

Miss Bee Buckley, riding her own mount, Timber Queen, placed second in the open class. Third place went to Easy Money, owned and ridden by Mrs. John J. Burns, and the white ribbon was won by Modern Melody, owned by Mrs. W. H. McDowell and ridden by her daughter, Elaine McDowell.

Entries consisted entirely of bridle path mounts and riders. Results of the seven preliminary events were as follows:

Massoud Samaha, Noted Syrian Poet, Honored at Dinner

Massoud Samaha, a Kentucky colonel and one of the outstanding Syrian poets, was honored by the Washington Syrian-American Society last night at a testimonial dinner at the Hotel Mayflower.

The occasion was the publication of a new book of poems by Samaha. The book, written in Arabic, national language of Syria, has 225 poems and fills 272 pages. The title is "Deewan."

The Rev. Benjamin T. Hoffiz, pastor of St. George's Syrian Orthodox Church here, explained that writing poetry in Arabic is probably more difficult than in any other tongue. Arabic poetry, he said, has inflexible rules guiding rhyme scheme and rhythm.

Speakers on the program included Babeeb Bagdasar, Teufick Fackre, Joseph S. Sado, Jamil B. Holway, Hussian F. Flannery, J. G. Raphael, Ameen Haddad, H. I. Katiban, Ayoub Hanna, Dr. Louis Jimmel, Ramez Haddad, S. Baddour and S. Nesrallah.

Col. Samaha lives at 717 Fifth street northwest.

Omaha Man Leaps From Plane, 2,000 Feet Up, to Death

Council Bluffs, Iowa, May 15 (AP).—A man identified as Ward C. Fritz, 22, of Omaha, Nebr., leaped to his death, Pilot Alvin Knudsen of Omaha said, from an airplane flying over the residential district here tonight.

Police said Knudsen told them he was hired by Fritz at the Omaha airport, and was flying at a height of 2,000 feet when he saw his passenger on a wing starting to jump.

The body fell in a freshly-spaded garden behind a house.

Elisha Waterman To Get Income of $5,000,000 Trust

New York, May 15 (AP).—Elisha Waterman, 39, heir to a fountain-pen fortune, who lived in poverty for 15 years because he married against his father's wishes, found himself tonight an apparently undisputed recipient of the income from a trust fund of $5,000,000 left by his grandfather, Lewis Edson Waterman, fountain pen inventor.

His father, Frank D. Waterman, who died May 6, cut Elisha off with $100, but under the terms of the grandfather's trust fund, "if the said Elisha Huson Waterman survives his father, the said Frank D. Waterman, he shall after the death of his father, and as long as he lives" receive the fund's income.

Oscar R. Ewing, representing the immediate family of Frank Waterman, said he understood there would be no legal action by other Waterman heirs to prevent Elisha from receiving his grandfather's bequest.

Selassie 'Too Sick' To Make Address

London, May 15 (AP).—Haile Selassie was described as "too sick in mind and body" today to attend a meeting he was scheduled to address here.

He fought in vain before the League of Nations Council Thursday in Geneva against the move to recognize Italy's conquest.

Dr. Warqneh Martin, Ethiopian minister to the British government, substituted for the Negus in an address to the Westminster Fellowship.

Japanese Airplane Flies 7,245 Miles in Endurance Record

Tokyo, May 15 (U.P.).—A big all-Japanese airplane, "Wings of the Century," landed at Kisaruzu Airport at 7:21 p. m. after a test endurance flight of 7,245 miles without refueling, being aloft 62 hours and 23 minutes.

The flight was described as breaking the previous record held by the French aviators, Boussoutrot and Rossi, 6,587 miles in 76 hours, 43 minutes.

"The Wings of the Century" was designed and built by the aeronautical research department of the Imperial University. The crew consisted of Test Pilot Maj. Yuzo Fujita, Sergt. Maj. Fukujiro Takahashi and Mechanic Sekine.

Mrs. Moses Taylor Wed in Alabama To Rich Coal Man

Newport, R. I., May 15 (AP).—Announcement of the marriage of Mrs. Moses Taylor, of the Glen, Portsmouth, one of the wealthiest women in the United States, and G. J. Guthrie Nicholson, of Jasper, Ala., millionaire coalman, in Birmingham, Ala., was received here tonight.

25,000 Brave Cold Rain as Circus Arrives

Children and Adults Dodge Animals and Mud as Tent City Rises.

Twenty-five thousand Washingtonians braved a wind-blown rain, ankle-deep mud and cold yesterday to see the trains of the "World's Greatest Circus" disgorge its collection of jungle animals, red wagons, tents and performers on the circus grounds at Fifth street and Florida avenue northeast.

Children and adults, who combined to make up one of the largest crowds ever on hand for the annual arrival of the big show, dodged mud puddles, tent poles and animal wagons to view the magic-like process of erecting a tent city in less than 12 hours.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Fetner, 221 Rhode Island avenue northeast, suffered leg injuries when a large wagon out of control struck them. They were treated at Sibley Hospital and released.

Performers and laborers of the Ringling Brothers and Barnum and Bailey Combined Shows, numbering 1,600 in all, were ready to put on a show today after issuance of a strike call in New York Saturday night threatened to prevent a Washington appearance.

More than a score of police were detailed to handle the gallery of fans as they crowded about workers and jammed auto traffic for blocks.

Crews of stake drivers, some with as many as ten men, attracted the biggest audiences. Swinging 16-pound hammers, the machinegun-like pounding of the crews drew rounds of applause.

Heading the list of jungle notables in the show is Gargantua, "largest and fiercest gorilla ever captured," in a special glass-inclosed and air-conditioned cage.

More than 100 double-length steel cars were required to transport the collection of 700 horses, 1,009 animals, tents, wagons and special equipment.

Masked Pair Robs Man Sitting in Car

Two masked colored bandits early yesterday held up Jacob L. Mosser, 24, of Trenton, N. J., and took his wallet. It contained only his driving permit. Mosser was parked in front of 1729 Q street northwest with Miss Mary Andrews, of Danville, Va., when the men approached.

Man Held for Hacking On Another's License

When Carl H. Campbell, 26, of 1362 North Carolina avenue northeast discovered his hacker's license was lost or stolen, he got a duplicate from police. At Terminal Cab Company headquarters, however, Campbell learned a car had already been taken out in his name.

Last night Patrolman W. T. Shomette of the traffic division arrested a taxi driver in possession of Campbell's license, which he said he had found. The man, who had pasted his own photograph over Campbell's, was held on an open charge.

Fair, Slowly Warmer Is Forecast for Today

Fair with slowly rising temperature was the Weather Bureau forecast for today, after the mercury dropped to a low of 47 early yesterday morning.

Yesterday's low—seven degrees under the May 15 minimum recorded last year and eight below normal—caused policemen at headquarters to bring out several electric heaters after the regular heating equipment had been cut off. The high of 60 was recorded shortly after 3 p. m.

Mother Slain, Four Of Family Chopped By Escaped Lunatic

Philadelphia, May 15 (AP).—A mother was hacked to death today and two sons and two daughters chopped with a cleaver in a home in which police said a third son sought refuge after escaping from a mental hospital.

Police said the fugitive, Abraham Sarkis, 36, former dentist, apparently stabbed himself in the abdomen and set fire to his clothing. The house caught fire.

Mrs. Pharise Sarkis, 62, the mother, was slain in bed.

The others, all critically injured, were attacked as they slept. They were Louis Sarkis, 32, a New York barber; John Sarkis, 28, a factory worker; Hettie Sarkis, 26, and Dorothy Sarkis, 24.

Police said Abraham, committed to the asylum in 1935 for slashing a store proprietor, escaped.

Byrd, Explorer Of Arctic, Lost On Long Island

New York, May 15 (AP).—Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd, who has explored 300,000 square miles of Arctic wastes, got lost in the "wilds" of Jamaica today.

Going to Babylon, Long Island, to dedicate a private seaplane base, Byrd missed train connections and disappointed a police escort and several thousand residents who were at the station.

5 Poles in Guatemala On Flight to Warsaw

Guatemala City, May 15 (U.P.).—Five Polish aviators arrived here at 11:15 a. m. today after a four-hour and 15-minute flight from Mexico City on the third leg of their flight from Los Angeles to Warsaw.

Harry Lauder Improving.

Glasgow, Scotland, May 15 (AP).—Sir Harry Lauder, Scotch comedian whose left thigh was fractured in a fall yesterday, was reported today to be improving.

Leader of Women Greenshirts Jailed In Brazil Roundup

Rio de Janeiro, May 15 (AP).—The head of the women's section of the greenshirt Integralist party was arrested today by police rounding up suspects in last Wednesday's short-lived Fascist uprising.

Dora Lemos, woman lieutenant of the fugitive Integralist chieftain, Plinio Salgado, was among 204 persons added to 800 already in jail in Rio de Janeiro.

Reports from Brazil's 20 states said there were 300 more under arrest in the nation-wide drive against suspected Integralists.

Police found an abandoned limousine on the outskirts of Rio de Janeiro containing 14 bombs and a quantity of other munitions along with several green shirts, steel helmets and Integralist emblems.

Heat-Burst Shells Peril Firefighters In Verdun Forest

Verdun, France, May 15 (AP).—Fire resulting from a three-month drought swept through Argonne Forest tonight, burning over American battlefields east of Verdun, as 500 soldiers of the Verdun garrison battled the flames.

Hundreds of buried shells and bullets of the World War exploded in the terrific heat, endangering fire-fighting squads.

The fire finally was extinguished after military detachments were sent to the battlefield from garrisons of the area.

Crash Almost Electrocutes 2 In Va.; 7 Hurt

Man Receives Fracture of Skull in Collision in District.

Traffic crashes yesterday sent seven persons to hospitals, two seriously injured.

A young couple escaped electrocution when the automobile in which they were riding tore into a guard rail on the Mount Vernon boulevard near Capital Overlook and knocked down an electric light pole.

The machine, driven by George W. Thorpe, 1661 Crescent place northwest, tore up 12 sections of the guard rail before striking the pole.

Dorothy G. Morgan, 22, of the Chevy Chase Club, passenger in the car, was taken to Garfield Hospital and treated for cuts to her right leg. Police said the power had to be cut off from Alexandria before a wrecking crew could extricate the car.

Stephen J. Healy, 53, of Chicago, was critically injured when struck by a taxicab at Eckington place and Florida avenue northeast. The cab was driven by Moses Wilkerson, 51, colored, police said.

Healy, who came to Washington with the Tim McCoy Wild West Show, was taken to Casualty Hospital, where he was reported to be suffering from fractured ribs and serious back injuries. Wilkerson was charged with reckless driving by Twelfth Precinct police. He gave his address as 597 Columbia road northwest.

Three youths were brought here to Georgetown Hospital from an accident on the Lee highway in Arlington.

All were treated for cuts and bruises. They were John Rodgers, 19, 3014 Q street northwest, Julius Krouse, 19, 326 N street southwest and Harry Buckley, 21, West Falls Church, Va.

Brock was operating one machine when it collided with one driven by Thomas J. Cole, colored, 27, 806 L street northwest. Miss Bright was riding with Brock.

Fayette Gross, colored, 56, Berwyn, Md., suffered possible rib fractures when an automobile catapulted from the Baltimore Boulevard into his yard, pinning him against a chicken house.

Plan to Exhume Reorganization Met With Chill

was concerned with the recovery program and the wage-hour bill.

Representative Bacon (Republican), of New York, charged the Administration was attempting to "alibi" the depression in the "same fumbling and contradictory manner" in which "it has conducted the Federal Government for the last five years."

He recalled that the President, in his Friday press conference had denied that Government spending as an aid to business had failed, and then added in a statement:

"Business, he said, had run away with the ball. But did not Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes and Solicitor General Jackson tell us in December that business caused the depression by going on a sit-down strike? . . .

"The president had another idea about the depression. He said that heavy inventories and high prices were at the bottom of it. I do not propose to argue economic technicalities with the President but every economist knows that in a freely functioning economic system heavy inventories and high prices do not go together. If Mr. Roosevelt finds them together then it is because of the restrictive and inflationary policies which he has pursued."

Denounces Hanes Plan.

Declaring that John W. Hanes, SEC commissioners recently nominated to be Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, had proposed that the RFC guarantee bank loans on inventories, he added:

"Such a scheme would have the effect of freezing inventories and keeping prices high. It would perpetuate the evil of which the President complains."

He said that last November 10 Secretary Morgenthau had reported that 1937 business activity "has been of a healthy character—not of the character that usually marks an unhealthy boom and precedes a serious depression" and "not characterized by the existence of huge inventories."

He quoted Morgenthau as saying "conditions are favorable for a continued increase in the level of business activity." Then the New Yorker added:

"Since that statement was made industrial production has gone down the toboggan and business activity has suffered the sharpest drop in so short a period in the history of the country.

"So much for New Deal alibis."

On the fight over the wage-hour bill, scheduled to reach the House floor on May 23, Representative Mary Norton (Democrat), of New Jersey, and Representative W. P. Lambertson (Republican), of Kansas, a committee member, engaged in a radio debate last night over the Mutual System.

Mrs. Norton said provisions for establishment of a 40 cent per hour wage minimum in three years and a 40-hour maximum work week after two years were sufficiently liberal to be absorbed by industry and that they would benefit 2,000,000 workers subjected to "sweatshop conditions."

"If we do any thinking about such conditions at all, and how can we escape it, we must know that they are bound to lead to riots, disorders and all the other ills brought about by unhappy working conditions," she said.

Lambertson assailed the measure as "ineffectual to meet the glaring problem of 13,000,000 unemployed."

Assails "Centralization."

"I don't like this centralization of power," he said. "A logical next step would be a proposal guaranteeing a yearly wage." He added that the rigid standards under the bill, in the face of "hard times," would drive thousands of small business firms to the wall.

The provision empowering Secretary Perkins to determine industries subject to the bill would mean the "sending of a thousand snoopers into business" with the "greatest deteriorating influence that industry could have today," he declared.

"This country," he added, "is too big, it is too varied to be blanketed in a bill with no differentials. If there were differentials, it would be an endless madhouse inadministration. Either way it will not work."

It is conceded that the bill will pass in the House, but much opposition in the Senate is indicated. The Senate appropriations committee apparently will see a fight over efforts to restrict the President's control over appropriations for spending agencies. A group of Democrats and Republicans, led by Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, is seeking to have the money appropriated directly to the agencies.

The Social Security Board, meanwhile, reported a sharp increase in relief expenditures in March. Total Federal, State and local costs incurred for aid to needy, including earnings under the works program, amounted to $234,800,000, an increase of about $18,000,000, or 8 per cent, over the February total.

first airmail flight made 20 years ago in 3 hours and 20 minutes.

Passengers included Postmaster General Farley and other Postoffice officials. Also in the group were James C. Edgerton, pilot on the original airmail flight; Merritt Chance, postmaster here when the feat was accomplished, and Paul Younts, Charlotte, N. C., postmaster, who is chairman of the Air Mail Week observance. Farley during the day received from Marion Weldon, screen actress, a model of the biplane used in early airmail service.

The airliner, captained by Eddie Rickenbacker, war ace, was piloted by Dick Merrill, who has twice flown the Atlantic, and Jack Lambie was the co-pilot.

Farley Broadcasts.

Speaking over the Columbia broadcasting network last night, the Postmaster General paid tribute to aviation pioneers for their part in giving this country the "world's greatest air-mail and air-transport system."

The first air-mail letter flown out of Washington was dispatched by former Postmaster General Albert S. Burleson to Postmaster T. H. Patton of New York City. The letter bore the first air-mail stamp to be issued by the Postoffice Department, and was canceled and autographed by President Wilson.

In a letter to Albert Goldman, postmaster of New York, Farley said it is significant that while other nations concentrated their airplane efforts on war designs, the United States built for peace and service.

Postmaster Toastmaster.

However, at the dinner in honor of the State winners in the Air-Mail Week essay contest, Capt. Rickenbacher declared that America, by building up its commercial aviation, is developing "a reservoir of resources and equipment which will make anyone hesitate to attack us." By carrying on this project, he told the contestants, "you are helping to protect the future of Nation."

Other speakers at the banquet were Ambrose O'Connell, special assistant to the Postmaster General; Second Assistant Postmaster General Branch and Postmaster Burke.

Among the distinguished guests were Senators Elmer Thomas, of Oklahoma, Pat McCarran, of Nevada; Lynn J. Frazier, of North Dakota, and F. Ryan Duffy, of Wisconsin.

Postmaster Younts was toastmaster.

Dr. Marie Molineux Dies.

Paris Recalls War In Arms Loan Drive

Paris, May 15 (AP).—In a manner reminiscent of World War loan drives, the national defense government of Premier Deladier sought today to excite public interest on the eve of opening subsription of a 5,000,000,000-franc ($140,000,000) armament loan.

Army planes roared over Paris and provincial centers, "bombarding" Sunday strollers with red, white and blue leaflets. Military bands paraded, bearing banners with the slogan, "Subscribe." Radio stations, movies and the press joined the drive.

Thomas Gildea Named President of G. U. Yard

Thomas J. Gildea, of Saddle River, N. J., was elected president of the yard in annual student elections yesterday at Georgetown University. Vincent J. Healy, of Newark, N. J., was named treasurer. A runoff election will be held today for secretary among William J. Driscoll, of Lawrence, Mass.; James G. Foley, of Ashmont, Mass., and Alfred Boylan, of Rochester, N. Y.

Seven Nations End Hague Convention

Oslo, Norway, May 15 (AP).—The seven small nations linked by The Hague convention today announced they would discontinue their mutual trade agreement July 1, "because of world conditions."

A communique issued in behalf of the signatories—Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Finland, Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg—emphasized they would continue economic collaboration "with the greatest good will."

The trade agreement, signed a year ago, bound the seven to seek lower trade barriers, abolish exchange restrictions and revive international credit.

of robberies in adjoining Maryland counties to "speedy trial and severe punishment." He said that "we want to make Washington known for its inhospitality to criminal elements."

A report of the Washington Criminal Justice Asociation on District crime in 1937, published yesterday, indicated that of 48 persons indicted for homicide, 33 were awaiting indictment and trial at the end of the year.

"We have been stressing quick justice on robberies and housebreakings rather than on homicides," Pine explained, "because the latter are usually spontaneous crimes. Fear of speedy trial and punishment is less likely to be a deterrent in such cases."

He added that three homicide trials were to open in local courts today.

"The calendar is arranged to bring about the trial of every homicide case before the end of the term on June 30," he said.

Flatly contradicting reports that lag in homicide trials was the fault of the judges, Pine asserted that "we have complete charge of the calendar."

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, who was praised in yesterday's crime report, refused to comment on statistics showing a 6.1 per cent increase in arrests in 1937 and an 11.6 per cent rise in felonies. Brown said he had not yet had time to study the report.

Authorities on the District crime problem noted the increase in probation from 14 to 22 per cent as "very bad." It was said the "five or six employes in the probation office cannot properly handle the 800 people under their supervision." Probation is granted with practically no investigation, it was stated by observers, who attributed the situation to "judicial leniency."

Americans Find Port of Solomon

on the shore of the Red Sea in the land of Edom.'

"With these vessels commerce was carried on directly with southern Arabia and thus indirectly with India. It is probable that the visit of the Queen of Sheba, which is narrated immediately after the construction of the merchant fleet, was inspired in part by the fear that Solomon's marine enterprise would diminish her revenues from the trade which passed by caravan through her territory."

The finds made at Tell El-Kheleifeh showed the principal industries of the city, which had its heyday from the tenth to the eighth centuries B. C., were the smelting of copper, the manufacture of copper implements, particularly spearheads; fishhooks and nails and sea trade, building of ships and fishing.

So important are Dr. Glueck's discoveries that another expedition is planned for next year, Dr. Burrows said.

Davies to Inspect Soviet Cement, Oil, Grain Production

Moscow, May 15 (AP).—Joseph E. Davies, retiring United States Ambassador to Soviet Russia, left Moscow today on a three-week trip to inspect grain growing, cement production and oil and coal exploitation in southern Russia—one of his last official acts before he goes to Brussels as Ambassador to Belgium and Minister to Luxembourg.

He entrained for Odessa, grain port on the Black sea, from where he planned to go to the oil ports of Batum and Alson, on the Black Sea, and Baku, on the Caspian.

He planned to visit oil refineries, coal mines in the Donets Basin, and the great cement works at Novorossiisk. There was doubt, however, that he would be permitted to visit the coal mines, which are only beginning to raise their output after a serious slump in the past year.

Frank Gets Air Time For Answer to Minton

Madison, Wis., May 15 (AP).—Dr. Glenn Frank, editor of Rural Progress, revealed today the National Broadcasting Co. has given him 15 minutes from Chicago Wednesday to answer a radio speech by Senator Sherman Minton (Democrat), of Indiana. Frank said the time was granted at his request, and that the same stations which carried Mintons' remarks would carry it.

around the dragon. Then the drums and gongs and cymbals were rolling again, and the dragon twisted from hunting to the attack. His great head, curiously like a lion's, with rolling eyes and bearded jaw, towered over his Chinese friends, while his long body, striped red, green and purple, panted in anger.

Because the dragon's home is the forest, his Chinese friends brought two cabbages to the dancing ground, so the dragon could pretend they were trees and feel at home. Sometimes his attack slowed, and then he received a new set of feet, as the dancing girls took turns. Again his striped coat was slightly twisted, and Pon Sue Louis, leader of the dancing troupe, would leave her place in the crowd and straighten it out.

To Joseph Chiang, unofficial press representative of the Chinese community, the dragon's dance was a victory celebration, but he would not name the victory. To a young lady who helped carry the dragon's head, the symbol of the dance had become obscure through long generations away from Chinese soil, and she added that her feet were tired.

The dragon retired, and the pretty dancers who had hidden beneath it came into the circle alone, to show the historic shadow boxing, the hand-to-hand fighting, the fighting with staffs and knives. The fights they staged were part of the war dancing, formal as in a theater, but the 8-foot wooden poles they swung crashed in the sound of real fighting.

There was a casualty, but he was by no means Chinese. Russell Saffell, 7, of 412 H street northwest, was burned when a firecracker exploded in his hand. He was treated at Casualty Hospital.

As a light rain started, the war dances were over, the last of the firecrackers were silent, and torn scraps of tissue paper turned the gutters blood red where the dragon and the dancing girls had fought.

Tangled Politics.

Political observers throughout the country have focused their attention on the Pennsylvania primaries tomorrow, but all they can see is confusion. The pre-primary campaigns have been more like a cat-and-dog fight than a contest for party nominations. Senator Guffey's charges of conspiracy to steal the election in Philadelphia are only a sample of the unrestrained mud-slinging that has been in progress for several weeks.

If there are any real issues in the campaign, they have been obscured by these inter-factional scraps. The electioneering has been overwhelmingly negative in character. Each faction in the Democratic Party is out to discredit its opponents with astonishingly little regard for what the consequences may be in the November election. If the new giants of Pennsylvania politics had deliberately set out to tear their triumphant machine apart, they could scarcely have done a more effective job.

Loyalty to the cause of labor has probably been the dominant note in the campaign. But that does not imply an advantage for the Guffey-C. I. O. faction which is backing Lieut. Gov. Thomas Kennedy for Governor and Mayor S. Davis Wilson of Philadelphia for Senator. The labor record of Mayor Wilson is under attack. And the very fact that the C. I. O. is sponsoring the Kennedy-Wilson ticket has brought the American Federation of Labor into the fight against it.

Gov. George H. Earle also has made a strong bid for labor support in his campaign for the Democratic Senatorial nomination on the basis of his record at Harrisburg. Along with Charles Alvin Jones, candidate for Governor, Mr. Earle has the support of the Democratic organization. But his hold upon the voters appears to have been weakened by grave charges of graft and corruption coming from his former attorney general, who is also seeking the nomination for Governor.

Pennsylvania voters are probably as confused by this medley of charges and claims as are the mere observers in other States. In ordinary circumstances it would appear that the Democrats have simply prepared a great harvest for the Republicans of the Keystone State. But the G. O. P. is also having its difficulties. Instead of being able to present a united front before their divided opponents, Republicans will be forced to choose between former Gov. Pinchot, now 72 years old, and Arthur H. James, designated as the Pew-Grundy candidate for Governor. While the two poles of the G. O. P. thus represented have not indulged in a free-for-all fight, Republican voters may find their choice on Tuesday no less difficult than that offered the Democrats.

Fair Play In Spending.

Under ordinary circumstances Senator King should have no difficulty in securing enactment of his bill to enable Washington to share in the proposed new PWA program on an equal footing with other communities. If this Federal money is to be spent, simple justice calls for its equitable distribution. Yet a new local bill introduced this late in the session will have to be very carefully handled to insure its acceptance before Congress adjourns.

Senator King's sponsorship of the bill arouses hope that it will meet with little opposition. The Utah Senator is understood to be vigorously opposed to the national spending-lending program. By introducing this measure to facilitate local PWA projects, in the event that the national program is approved, he emphasizes the clear line of distinction between the two issues. The national undertaking should be approved or rejected in accord with the faith of Congress in pump priming as a means of recovery under present conditions. The local bill poses only the question of permitting the District to obtain a fair share of any money that may be appropriated for public works.

Washington has been seriously penalized by the discriminatory features of the 1934 act enabling the District to borrow from the Public Works Administration. Grants under this measure have totaled 30 instead of 45 per cent as in the case of other communities obtaining PWA loans in recent years. Repayment provisions have also been unnecessarily severe, in spite of the fact that Washington has no bonded debt.

Because of the neglect of municipal improvements here in recent years the District has a list of truly urgent projects that should be undertaken as soon as funds are available. The normal course would be to distribute these expenses over the budgets of the next several years. If Congress decides on another outpouring of cash to stimulate economic activity, however, it would be a pity to exclude from consideration these useful improvements for which funds will soon or late have to be appropriated.

Mussolini Explains Again.

It is not the least significant aspect of Mussolini's sword-clanking speech at Genoa that for at least the third time in as many months he found it necessary to justify his attitude toward Germany's absorption of Austria.

As before, he attempted to persuade the Italian people that the extension of Germany's frontiers to the Brenner was an inevitability which it would have been foolish and futile to resist; that Anschluss constituted no danger to the Italian kingdom; and that Germany and Italy are now better friends than ever.

Austria remains the Duce's King Charles' head. He cannot get it out of his mind. Despite the solemn pledges made to him by Hitler that Germany would for all time regard the Brenner as an inviolable border, neither he nor the Italian people can ignore the presence on Italy's flank of an increasingly powerful Reich. Nor can Mussolini ignore the fact that by the disappearance of Austria Italy has lost a customer who paid in cash. No matter how strong the Berlin-Rome axis may be or may become it cannot improve Italy's economic situation. Regarding that situation he said nothing, probably because no amount of rhetoric can hide from the Italian people the fact that Italy's economic position is anything but good.

Anyway, Austria has passed into history. What was done cannot be undone. Reconciling himself to the new situation, therefore, Mussolini is apparently determined to capitalize the blackmailing value of the axis for all it is worth.

This helps explain the contrast between his very ardent references to Germany, the more lukewarm reference to Great Britain and the definitely frigid mention of France in the Genoa speech. Between the German and the Roman worlds which are now "in immediate contact," he said, "friendship is lasting." But of the recently concluded pact with Great Britain he said that "it may be thought that this agreement will be lasting." The qualification is significant. As for France, Mussolini is not even sure that an agreement with that country can be reached since France and Italy hold opposite views regarding the Spanish struggle.

In other words, Great Britain and more particularly France are warned that unless they are prepared to harmonize their policies with those of Italy, the Rome government will strengthen the link to Berlin. And he saw fit to add that if the democracies make any move to wage an ideological war against the dictatorships, the latter, for their part, will "immediately form a bloc and will march together to the end."

That the democracies have any such intention is obviously fantastic. Great Britain has gone out of her way to re-establish peaceful relations with Rome and is seeking agreement also with Berlin. To please Mussolini, Chamberlain sacrificed Ethiopia and is prepared to sacrifice republican Spain. To satisfy Hitler, the London government is eager to have Czechoslovakia make every possible concession to the Sudeten Germans. As for the United States, the fact is apparent that we have no desire to get mixed up in any conflict of any kind.

But Mussolini, like all dictators, needs an enemy to hold before his people as the reason why they must continue to groan under the burden of spending more of their substance for war preparations. Yesterday it was Great Britain that was the enemy. Now Great Britain is, temporarily at least, a friend. Some ill-considered speeches from the "other side of the ocean" on the theme of a united democratic front to stop Fascist aggressors have enabled the Duce to fill the void. The new enemies are the democracies including the United States. But in arming against them Italy will, of course, not neglect to arm against its friend of the north. The Italian war machine may be looking west, but it is facing north.

The PWA And The States.

The work-relief and pump-priming measure just passed by the House contains some extraordinary provisions that have so far attracted little public notice. There is particular cause for protest against the provision which would enable the PWA to construct and lease projects, "with or without the privilege of purchase," to States, local governments, and other public bodies.

Coupled with this leasing privilege is a proviso that the non-recoverable portion of the cost of a leased project shall not exceed 45 per cent of the total cost. Thus, if any State or local government is prevented from borrowing because of constitutional limitations, the PWA administrator could advance funds to it on agreement by the receiving agency to pay back 55 per cent of such advances within 25 years.

It is plain that the purpose of these involved clauses is to enable local governments to disregard limitations upon their power to incur debt. Representative Dirksen asked some very pertinent questions in course of the debate on this section of the bill. He noted that the effect would be to provide for a 100 per cent investment by the Federal Government, no securities to be issued by the local government. Nevertheless, under the leases or agreements concluded, local officials would be acknowledging the existence of a debt. And as Mr. Dirksen says, funds to make the agreed upon payments would have to be provided out of current taxes.

There is the further possibility that future local governments might repudiate the promises to pay made by present authorities on the ground that constitutional prohibitions upon debt increases had been evaded. If, on the other hand, the PWA should succeed in getting around the debt prohibitions contained in State constitutions, a very bad precedent would be established. Representative Dirksen is not exaggerating when he warns that such attempts would "set in motion the forces that might ultimately wreck the whole system of separate and divided powers between the State and Federal governments."

Fortunately a move is on foot in the Senate to overhaul and if possible eliminate the entire section providing for a renewal of PWA pump-priming. If this effort does not succeed, a determined fight will be in order to protect the States against proposals that would give a pretense of legality to violations of their constitutions.

Gains Against Crime.

The investment of those citizens who for the past two years have supported the Washington Criminal Justice Association earned good returns in 1937. According to the association's second annual report, positive progress is being made toward the reduction of crime in the Capital.

It is true that the number of major crimes in the District increased last year. But similar increases are reported from many large cities—probably one effect of the renewed depression. The significant fact is that police here solved by actual arrest a higher percentage of crime than in 1936 and this with no additions to the force.

The District's prosecutors and judges are likewise functioning in encouraging fashion. The grand jury returned 40 per cent more indictments last year than in 1936. In this achievement, the District attorney co-operated fully, recording a substantial increase in guilty pleas. Continuing the good work, the criminal court found 938 persons guilty, an increase of 253 over the preceding year's total.

Meantime, the Police Court released fewer persons charged with major offenses than in 1936. It is evident that Washington is becoming a less attractive place for criminals. With arrests increasing, indictments surer and a marked disinclination of the courts to compromise, Washington should soon lose much of its unbecoming reputation of being an "easy town."

The one conspicuous black mark in the report occurs in the analysis of juvenile crime. The past year showed a 50 per cent increase in serious offenses charged against children. Here is an incontrovertible argument for passage of the pending District Juvenile Court bill. For it is the purpose of that legislation to equip local authorities with better means of rehabilitating, as contrasted with merely punishing, youths tending toward criminal careers.

Similarly, the attention of Congress might well be directed to the report's comments on probation in the District. Washington is missing its opportunity to aid in the reform of probationers because of lack of funds to employ an adequate supervisory staff.

It may be asked how the Criminal Justice Association shares in the credit for the general improvement in Washington's law enforcement record. An illustration may serve for answer. One of its first undertakings was an inquiry into the local bail bond system. A general lack of co-ordination was discovered which invited inefficiency if not abuse. Recommendations for changes were submitted to the officials concerned and several are now being put into effect. The result is unquestionably a more effective check upon criminals released on bond.

Broadly speaking, the C. J. A. focuses attention on the serious problem of crime, thereby stimulating officials to improve their operations and the public to supply the needed support. That the association has established a record for tactful and co-operative service in so brief a period is a real tribute to the ability of its director, Mr. James Allen Nolan.

Newry's Visitor.

One touch of nature acting queerly makes the whole world kin. That is why the budget of current news from Europe includes a report from Newry, Northern Ireland, that the town is excited by the arrival of a white blackbird.

Well, not only Newry will be excited by what may be either a disturbing portent, or, be it hoped, a harbinger of hope. White blackbirds don't alight on every bush. They constitute phenomena which by their very incredibility, even when seen, touch the springs of wonder that lie deep in the human breast.

The world is full of scoffers. There will be some who will always insist that, in the words of the farmer seeing the giraffe for the first time—"there ain't no such animal." Yet white blackbirds continue to be reported, and always they awaken interest.

Actually it is much easier to believe in the white blackbird of Newry than in many much more customary phenomena taking place in the man-made world of war and misery. And the irony is that the more doubt there is over the irrationalities of nature the more evidence accumulates for disbelief in the rationality of man.

Spending And Tax Reform.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Harry L. Hopkins in his recent radio talk refuted charges of waste in the WPA and told of the many lasting improvements it has set up over the Nation.

Economically considered the entire New Deal spending program is a waste. There may be need of the spending under the circumstances, but the circumstances are indefensible. They are the results of long years of increasing destructive use of the taxing power, Federal and State, that penalizes the workers of society for the benefit of its drones whose profits mount while they sleep. The WPA improvements like all others of lasting character increase the value of land. A Western farm journal recently complained that the Federal aids to agriculture brought only higher land rents to tenant farmers.

Though the New Deal is not primarily responsible for these conditions, it is responsible for their continuance, as it has taken no stand for basic tax reform, or given any hint to the States of the steps they should take in that direction.

England has a like situation with worse results. The case there is less hopeless, however, as both the Labor and the Liberal parties have long fought—with present prospects of success for the Laborites—to turn the "unearned increment" of their landed proprietors to public account by a progressive tax on land values with exemption of improvements and corresponding reduction in industrial taxation.

Prediction Fulfilled?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

A flash came to my mind last night that the words of Jesus were fulfilled by the Emperor of Ethiopia a day or two ago when he was in the League of Nations and rebuked the sordidness of certain nations in abandoning the principles of right and truth and their promises and the independence of Ethiopia.

For Jesus said that the day will come when "the Queen of the South would rise up and condemn this generation." Many prophecies have been fulfilled in this lifetime—the electric telegraph, the automobile, the battleship, the submarine and the World War in which this country would take part at His order and overcome the Leviathan, the terror of the sea (the submarine).—Isaiah, xxvii:1.

Note On Sheean.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Why does Vincent Sheean take almost an entire column of your valuable space to say that the peoples of authoritarian or totalitarian states do not want war but that the various dictators do? Ho, hum! We knew that already. There was enough padding in that column to boost the price of cotton.

Incidentally, "authoritarian" and "totalitarian" seems to be taking the play from (and thank heaven!) the "turn of the century."

New Deal Objectives.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Five years of pump-priming has proved a disastrous failure. We have as many unemployed today as in the beginning, and are in one of the worst depressions in our history. And yet, the Administration, aided and abetted by the Congress, persists in its follies. England tried pump-priming, but had the good sense to abandon it the moment its ineffectiveness was demonstrated.

If the Administration is sincere in its desire to restore the prosperity of the country, but has not the gumption to know the ways and means, why doesn't it adopt the policies that have been successful in England and 21 other countries which pursued the same policies? These policies are, in brief, no pump-priming, no government competition with private business, a managed currency, together with other policies calculated to maintain public confidence, and so release the initiative and energies of the business interests of their respective countries. The result is that all of these countries have balanced their budgets, and are on the high road to complete recovery.

The persistent pursuit of the Administration in its utterly unsound and discredited policies raises the question: What is the motive and objective behind it all? By deduction from the accumulated evidence of the past five years the writer is convinced beyond the shadow of a doubt that the purpose of the Administration, in which Congress has been an unwitting accomplice, is to socialize the industries of the Nation, to change our form of government, and create among us the totalitarian, or collectivist, state.

A Well-Wisher.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

As one of a small group who had the honor of waving the President a "bon voyage" to his latest outing, and barely missed offering him a "welcome home" this morning to our Capital City, may I take this occasion as a returned "innocent abroad," who has spent a number of years in southern Europe, to express my appreciation for his devoted and enlightened service and direction as captain of the great American Ship of State?

I have heard too often nationals of other countries as well as our own criticize destructively their heads of state. How infinitely better for them, as well as the heads, to do a little neighborly well-wishing, and thus contribute their bit to the well-being of their country.

Abandonment Of Ethiopia.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Millions of persons must have been saddened this past week by the most shocking display of bankrupt character that has been exhibited in international affairs in many a long day. If it is necessary for the League of Nations to show so nakedly to all of us the cynicism and selfishness which rule world affairs, one's first thought is that it might better close up shop and go home, lest men lose the last vestige of faith in their fellow-beings.

Yet possibly just such a display is necessary; it brings home to all of us, as it might not have been brought home otherwise, the shifting sands on which men and nations are pinning their very existence. It may be that a long series of such incidents, even more horrible than the cynical and open abandonment of Ethiopia, Spain and China, will cause the world in time to seek more solid ground.

Collective security, men say, has been proved a will-o'-the wisp; better flee away to the security of "realism." But how can security be founded on selfishness, fear, inertia, downright callousness? Nations can exist on those standards no more than can individuals. These preachers are not realists, they are blind men who are laying up for themselves or their children tomorrow's certain retribution.

It is difficult to see, however, where men like Senator Borah are justified in delivering criticisms of England's foreign policy. America herself stands in a place where the best charity, and certainly the best common sense, would seem to be the holding of her tongue. We can hardly point to our own foreign policy (to give a series of well-known and self-evident contradictions a name) of the past 20 years and urge other nations to go and do likewise. We are too prone to tell other nations that they should do, not as we do, but as we say—advice they are justified in resenting. England has a heavy load to bear, and whatever we may think of the way she carries it, we might better wait until our advice is asked if we expect to arouse anything but resentment by giving it.

Most of us refuse to learn anything until we come to the point where we must, because there is no alternative. Especially is this true in the field of the spirit. Tolerance, love, forbearance, generosity, sincerity—those qualities will some day rule in international affairs because no other qualities have the power of permanency or peace. Just how much suffering mankind must go through before the lesson is learned we cannot know. Apparently it will only be as a last resort, and as individuals become governed by right thinking. One can almost see the long road ahead of us, but at least it is becoming clear.

School Board Suggestion.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

In view of the fact that three vacancies on the Board of Education in Washington will occur July 1, it might be advisable for the District Court to institute a reform.

That reform is to appoint a board member from organized labor. Heretofore labor has been completely ignored. This is a mistake. Organized labor in Washington has many members who have several years of responsible executive experience and who would make worthy members of the Board of Education.

I believe that if the local A. F. of L. would respectfully petition the District Court and explain why a labor viewpoint is needed in deliberations of policy of the board and ask that at least one of the new appointees be a labor member, without designating any particular individual, that the court would act favorably. Once before this matter was brought up, but the mistake was made of naming a certain person.

I believe that the District Court justices are men of high caliber and have made pretty good selections so far. I believe that they also recognize the growing power and responsibility of labor and the need for the labor viewpoint in educational policies.

The Nature Of The District.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Discussion of the government of the District and of votes for Washingtonians seems to disregard an important point: That the Federal District is a thing in itself with a meaning. It is a neutral territory set aside by the Union to be the seat of Federal Government.

The fact that in the past two generations it has been filled by the City of Washington does not alter the nature of the District. It was meant to be a permanent symbol of what we were and intended to remain, which was a Union of American Republics, not a unitary national republic.

We can be what we choose to be. If we want to be a national republic, a unit, we can be; but to be that we must have a new Constitution and abolish State constitutions. There would then be no more need for a Federal district than for State boundaries, except to define administrative areas of a central government. The vote in Washington would then mean just as much or as little as it would anywhere else.

If we are still a federated Union of States in which all guarantee the republican form of government for each member State, then this neutral Federal district still has a meaning and should remain in existence. The Federal Constitution and the State constitutions (until they shall be abolished) indicate that is what we are.

That does not mean, however, that the District is or should be the plaything of Congress, to be neglected or misgoverned at the whim of any man who has never learned what it is he represents.

On the contrary, it is the obvious duty of Congress to set up and maintain a model government for the District, which contains the only city in the United States where the Federal Congress has a right to govern.

Not only those who are truly Washingtonians, but all the States have a perfect right to require that of Congress.

Wings.

TWENTY years ago, on May 15, 1918, a crowd collected on the polo field down by the Potomac River. The usual curious crowd was pressing against the ropes, but there were also Army officers, officials, and President Woodrow Wilson, himself. It was no ordinary occasion. The ceremonies were impressive, for the first plane to fly the mail was there before them, shining in the morning sunlight.

It was a 150-horsepower plane, built to carry two pilots, but one seat had been removed and a pit built in to hold the mail. The pilot to start with this first mail sack was Lieut. Boyle, a student Army pilot. He put on his goggles and took to the air before a gaping crowd at 11:20 a. m. His destination was Philadelphia, but half an hour later he was lost, and he landed at Waldorf, Md., with a broken propeller. The mail was returned to Washington and flown safely the next day.

The same day saw two other pilots take off with mail, one starting from New York, the other from Philadelphia. Both were bound for Washington. They arrived safely. This day in May is important in air-mail history for from that date until the present the air-mail service has been a continuous one.

In 1918 it took a train five hours to go from Washington to New York. It took a plane three hours to cover the same distance, but since trucks had to carry the mail to and from the planes no time was saved. It was realized that time could be gained on longer trips. So the service was extended east and west. By 1921 air mail reached the Pacific Ocean.

During these years planes flew only during the daylight hours. But by 1923 instruments and lights were perfected so that night flying as well as daylight flying was established.

From May until August that first year, 1918, the Army had charge of the air mail. Then the Postoffice took it over. In 1926 private contractors became interested and paved the way for the great commercial airways of today.

The trail of the pioneer, whether it be by covered wagon, submarine, motor car or through the sky in a plane, is a trail bordered with his bones. Perhaps it is well to consider the young men who first carried our mail. Of the 40 young student civilian mail pilots who started out bravely, few are left—probably two only. Pilot Grabb crashed, and Henley was burned to death. Stevens was married one day and "cracked up" the next. Few escaped with minor injuries. Ira Biffle was one of them. He died three years ago. He is particularly interesting to us because he taught Charles A. Lindbergh to fly. Lee is still flying and now has more air miles to his credit than any other air pilot on earth. Paul Garber, who joined those first air pilots in November, 1918, is still very much alive and in charge of the aeroplane building at the Smithsonian Institution.

What a long way we have come since that first man across the sea in China, probably before the time of Christ, discovered that he could train geese to carry messages from one town to another. Then ancient Egyptians found that pigeons could fly great distance with messages tied to their legs and be depended upon to return.

There was no other way to send messages rapidly until the invention of the balloon. The first balloon to cross the English Channel with mail met with bad weather and had to throw the precious letters overboard. The aeroplane was invented in 1903, but did not carry messages until an Englishman started to do so at an exposition in East India, and then just as a novelty. The mail carried was 5 miles by air, then taken on by train.

Aviation developed slowly in America, but after we entered the war in 1917 progress was swift. That was due to the fact that the Allies agreed to let America assume a broad program for the training of men for air flights, and for the design and production of plane engines.

Maybe you will hear the hum of a plane high in the clouds above your house today. It is such a common sound that you will not even leave your comfortable chair to gaze at it. But think of that young man who tightened his belt on the polo field in 1918 and started for Philadelphia. He was also starting for Chicago, San Francisco and around the world.

Bartenders, Now And Then.

WHEN I FIRST put on long pants and thus qualified for admission to the bar the bartender was a plain man with simple duties. He had to know how to draw beer with the proper depth of collar, a knack easily mastered, and, on the intellectual side, he had to be able to read labels so as to distinguish between rye and bourbon, even though both bottles were filled from the one keg. He had to be a durable listener, able to put in, at the proper moment in the recital of a customer's domestic woes, with a sympathetic, "Well, that's the way life goes," and his professional eye and ear were supposed to have an instinct for the dew-point beyond which a patron might drop asleep on the street car and be carried past his corner going home.

PEGLER.

And, of course, he had to know how to make change and keep a mental file of those patrons who had steady jobs and were entitled to credit, and to what extent, between paydays.

Beyond these gifts and an ability to keep peace by authority or restore it with his beer hammer the bartender had no other requirements to meet.

• • • •

THERE IS an old superstition that he was also a philosopher by night and a physician in the morning, but that is only superstition. The philosophy with which the rye and bourbon clients on the other side of the bar endowed his remarks on life with its sorrows was imperceptible to the buttermilk patron. And the medicine which he dispensed with soothing assurances in the morning never did any good. The patients only thought it did because they had reached that point at which a man can't feel any worse and might get better or die right away. Those who didn't die got better and gave the bartender credit.

I suppose most of those old bartenders are in their graves by now or demoted to kitchen police in the new saloons, for the new crop are young men, many of them graduates of the speakeasies, and they have problems which the veterans of that day would be unable to solve and would scorn to consider.

There are the Sidecar, for example, composed of cointreau, brandy and lemon juice; the Alexander, of creme de cacao, sweet cream and gin; the Honeydew, of gin, strained honey and the juice of a lime, and the Pink Lady, made of shaving lotion, buttermilk and strawberry extract. There are various sorts of kisses and caresses and that strange affectation cultivated in the time of prohibition to stifle the taste of the liquor, called the Old Fashioned cocktail—a fruit salad dunked in rye and crowned with a sprig of turnip greens.

I shudder to think what might have happened in my saloon days to anyone who had asked a bartender for a Pink Lady. I am thinking of the respectable bartenders, of course, but even the others would have misconstrued the order and jerked a thumb toward the back room. You see, they kept the ladies strictly segregated even in those places where ladies were tolerated at all—which, of course, were places of very low character.

• • • •

AND EVEN if one had asked for an Alexander and explained that it started with creme de cacao, my kind of bartender would have come roaring right over the counter to run him out of the ward. For one thing, he didn't like people to stump him with prescriptions that he didn't know how to fill. For another, he never heard of creme de cacao. And, finally, it is impossible to pronounce creme de cacao without a certain inflection which would have marked one as an undesirable customer in a men's bar. You go around saying creme de cacao and see if it doesn't get you a bad name, even now.

And I was speaking of ladies, pink and otherwise. The modern bartender's clientele is drawn largely from the distaff side, and traffic with this type of trade, with ladies pouring their troubles and gossip into his ear, has made a he-tabby of him. He is also compelled to intervene in their fights without resort to his bungstarter, of which he has none, anyway, because lady-lushers do not go for that beer—a fact which our brewers will be glad to avow, as it relieves them of blame for lady-lushing in saloons. He is a cross between a salad cook, a pharmacist, a psychoanalyist and a banker, for he must cash checks and keep up on credit ratings, and I am not opposed to a belief that he even practices massage on his customers on his own time.

But I am not protesting or lamenting a departed mode. I am just making observations on the passing show.

World Joblessness

As Unemployment Gains In All Quarters, Leaders Turn To Van Zeeland Report As Basis For International Co-operation.

By Smith Simpson.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

WHEN President Roosevelt assumed office in 1933, unemployment had reached a staggering total in the United States. During his campaign Mr. Roosevelt had promised that "home problems" would come first; and unemployment was tackled as a "home problem" directly through the NRA and indirectly through a variety of pump-priming measures.

Between 1933 and 1937 these had an appreciable effect upon the Nation's unemployment. The American Federation of Labor, which had estimated unemployment at 13,100,000 in January, 1933, estimated unemployment in September, 1937, at 8,291,466, the low point of unemployment in 1937, according to the federation's figures. The National Industrial Conference Board estimated an even sharper decline, from 14,194,000 in January, 1933, to 7,529,000 in March, 1937, the low point in the conference board's figures. By January, 1938, unemployment had risen to 10,973,395 according to A. F. of L. estimates and to 10,342,000 according to conference board statistics.

The total labor force of the country, including both employed and unemployed workers, is estimated at 53,340,000 by the conference board. That means that one worker in every five was unemployed in the United States at the beginning of 1938. The situation has worsened rather than improved since.

Arms Programs Give Temporary Assistance.

THE UNEMPLOYMENT situation in other leading industrial countries has been considerably changed by armament programs. Huge programs of defense have done much, at least temporarily, to offset declines in total employment. But it is worth observing that even in these countries, although armament has deferred and cushioned the decline, the decline has nevertheless occurred. In Great Britain there has been a decline from 11,710,000 employed persons in September to 11,439,000 in December. The decline began in the Netherlands in October, in Poland and Canada in November, and in Czechoslovakia, France and Germany in December. In Belgium, employment began decreasing in August and, as in the United States, has kept decreasing since.

These facts would certainly lead an ordinary person to inquire if there are not common causes for this universal phenomenon. He would ask if unemployment is a "home problem" after all, or an international problem. An interesting thing about the present trend is that, whereas declines in employment occurred first in Europe in 1929, the United States set the pace in 1937.

In the first depression of this decade, the virus worked from Europe to the United States; in the second depression, it has worked from the United States to Europe. The financial, industrial and commercial interdependence of the world has provided the means of spreading the ills of one region of the world to other regions. The couriers of commerce have proven couriers of the disease of unemployment. As tuning forks vibrate in sympathy with each other so does employment in one industrial country apparently vibrate sympathetically with employment conditions in other industrial countries. Even Germany, which most strenuously seeks the achievement of self-sufficiency, has not been able to prevent a sympathetic vibration with the economies of other leading industrial countries.

For all of President Roosevelt's insistence upon "home problems first," there has been no attempt on the part of the Administration to disguise the fact that a large part of our unemployment is the result of a decline in international trade.

Factory Exports Fell Sharply From '29 To '32.

IT WAS no blessing to American industry that our exports of manufactured and semi-manufactured products fell from three and three-tenths billions of dollars in 1929 to eight-tenths billions in 1932. It was no blessing to either industry or agriculture that our total exports declined to the low ebb of one and six-tenths billions of dollars in 1932. Some 14,000,000 persons in the United States depend upon foreign trade for their livelihood. A decline in our international trade inevitably has a direct effect upon employment in this country. This accounts, in no small part, for the fact that, even during our best months in 1935 to 1937, when production and employment were at their highest, we still had a persistent reservoir of some six or seven million unemployed persons.

The National Foreign Trade Council recently conducted a survey among its members to ascertain the importance of American export trade in the current depression. The survey produced some interesting facts. In the heavy machinery industry, domestic orders fell to about 10 per cent of production capacity while export orders brought production up to 90 per cent of factory capacity. In the steel industry, exports in 1937 increased 160 per cent over 1936. In the farm implements industry, export sales were 30 per cent of total sales in 1937. In the typewriter industry, export orders were 26 per cent of total sales in 1937. In the refrigerator industry, export orders showed a 25 per cent increase during 1937. In the petroleum industry, exports amounted to 350 millions of dollars in 1937. These increases in exports occurred in a year in which domestic orders were rapidly declining; and indicate the importance of foreign trade to the solution of unemployment in the United States.

This industrial dependence of the United States upon the rest of the world does not necessarily lead to the conclusion that we should cooperate politically with other countries, but it strongly suggests the necessity of economic co-operation if we would solve our own unemployment problem.

Report Suggested Means of Co-operation.

THE VAN ZEELAND report, published in January, sketched the possible lines of financial and economic co-operation which countries could profitably undertake in pursuit of their efforts to increase and stabilize employment. Certain of our public men dismissed the report lightly, stating that the United States was not interested in the international collaboration which the report recommended. The continuation of the depression, however, and the irreducible corps of our unemployed who cannot find employment without a revival of international trade makes a restudy of the report imperative for this country.

Certain of the proposals of the Van Zeeland report are proposals with which American foreign policy is already in accord. M. Van Zeeland found that the principal direct obstacles in the way of international trade were (1) tariffs, (2) indirect protection through administrative regulations and practices, (3) quotas, (4) currency changes, and (5) restrictions concerning the transfer of funds.

As a remedy for the first three, Van Zeeland proposed bilateral trade agreements. That is what the United States is now engaged in negotiating under the reciprocal trade act of 1934. As a remedy for the last two obstacles to trade, Van Zeeland proposed, as a first step, nothing more radical and strange to American policy than the extension of the tripartite agreement between the United States, Great Britain and France, to which Belgium, The Netherlands and Switzerland have adhered.

As an additional step, he proposed a liquidation of uncollectible debts, as the present Administration has done in the domestic sphere through mortgage and reorganization legislation; and finally, the creation of a common fund, the resources of which might be applied to assist in the readjustment of certain national economics to the new international trade policy which the report recommended. The fund would be utilized only in special cases, when normal methods of financing proved inadequate.

The direct obstacles which Van Zeeland found in the way of international trade are, of course, produced by more fundamental difficulties. Various countries have various reasons for erecting barriers to trade. For some countries the unequal distribution of raw materials leads to the protection of home efforts to produce substitutes. Certain States see no solution of this except in the redistribution of colonies.

The unequal distribution of capital is blamed by other countries for their financial and economic difficulties and the resulting barriers which are erected against imports of goods. Intensive rearrangement is a cause of financial strain and excessive taxation of trade.

Where does this bring us? Foreign trade is essential if we would solve our unemployment problem, reduce our relief load, and decrease taxes for relief purposes. Foreign trade is obstructed by barriers of various kinds. These barriers arise from deep-seated causes, some of which are economic, others of which are political. In no case can these causes be reached without international collaboration. Since their effects are international, the causes can be removed only by appropriate international action. This involves, as a minimum, economic and financial co-operation.

Circus World

By Buck Baker
As told to Scott Hart.

A Book Review By A Veteran Clown.

THE CIRCUS IS HERE AGAIN, but I won't be going to see it, though I performed for 25 consecutive seasons under all the big tops John Ringling raised in this land, I wouldn't want to go on the Ringling lot again. Too many ghosts would be there—ghosts of my six splendid wives, ghosts of my dead friends. Maybe you know what I mean.

But I certainly thank George Beal for writing "Through the Back Door of the Circus." I read it in one night, out at my house in Brentwood, Md. The light wasn't out in my room all that night. The light seemed strange to Old Bill, my pet duck, and to Old Red, my pet goose; anyhow those two birds quacked all night long. Across my room walked the Ringling menagerie, the caged beasts and the roustabouts, the balloon sellers and the men who sell walking canes. Slivers Oakley, the clown (who died from dejection and without a laugh), John Ringling of the amazing memory and the greatest Ringling of them all, the Flying Cardonas and Lietzel, lovely Lillian Lietzel. (I told her, not so long before she died, to change those hand rings she spun on, saying that some day they would crystalize and the circus would lose the best thing in it.)

I've read a lot of books about the circus and many articles in magazines. Most of them seemed the work of people who got the information from show folks. You can't get a circus story from circus folks. You've got to go on the ground, on the lots, and you must live there more than a while. George Beal has done this. I would know it from reading his story, even if I hadn't seen him so often hanging around the show. Positively, he is accurate in his detail, though he does once call a pull-up team a "pull-over." And again he suddenly shifts his story from the Ringling Show to the Cole Show. He does it without telling his reader, and many would think he still was speaking of the Ringlings.

The shift was made very easily; he just began talking of muddy lots, bad weather and Jess Atkins. Hello, I said out loud in my room that night: what is Jess doing with the Ringlings? And then he began speaking of parades and I wondered if the Ringlings were on the streets again. I knew they gave up parades as a general thing back about 1918. But those are things wouldn't be noticed by anybody but an old wise guy like me.

His title caught my good notions. He meant that the reader would get a peek back of the scenes. I thought of it this way: there's never been a front door to the circus for anyone but the public. No circus performer ever goes through the front door, literally. They won't let performers use the front way, will fine them heavily if they do. They never told us the reason, but I guessed it.

MR. BEAL WANTED TO SHOW the back of the circus, the parts you don't see from the blue seats or the reserved ones. It will interest many people. It interested me who knew it so well and so long. But, someday, a real circus man will come along to show the stuff I've long wanted to see in print. Why doesn't somebody explain that the appeal of the clown is based in the sadism that is latent in most people? The clown suffers (at least to the public's eye), many cuts and outrages from overturned automobiles, from the boxing gloves of fellow clowns, from the clubs of clown policemen, from the many ingenious and clownish devices of tortue. They laugh at it, they demand it. I know what they were laughing at, and I didn't hate them or even feel bitter. But most clowns don't know why the crowds yell loudest when the clows seem to be hurt. That's not a nice thought, is it?

And why can't someone tell the public that clowns are made of flesh and blood—too much of flesh and blood—and the same kind as yours. Some of them laughed when their hearts were breaking, and some of them, like myself, never gave a damn. We weren't even born to be clowns. We drifted into it and for the good reason that a good clown gets good pay. Five hundred a week isn't unusual.

I wanted someone to do a book on the personalities, the better known ones, of the circus. Right now, there are 350 well known books on the circus, generally. I know of few good ones on circus personalities.

I CLAIM TO BE the only man alive who was shipped C. O. D. by express. It was hot that night, and the afternoon had scorched. They said it was 130 degrees in the aerial loft. The show train was parked on a siding and I heard it would be delayed there an hour or more. There was a trestle nearby, spanning a cool river. I and two others leaped from the car, pulled off our clothes and threw them back in a window. We swam in the river, but watching the train on the tracks above. We watched it all right—and saw it leave us.

We walked through the bushes, three naked men, to a small tank station where the ticket agent did all he could for us. He cut three gunny sacks at the top and made togas for us. But he couldn't give us free transportation to the next city where the show went on the next day.

"You can ship us C. O. D.," I begged him. "Put us in the baggage car, label us if you choose and John Ringling will pay the freight when we arrive on the lot in the morning." To this he agreed.

John Ringling seldom came early to the lot. There were competent men to look to his business. And we figured one of these would pay our freight. On that particular morning John Ringling had gone early to the lot. He was there when the express wagon, drawn by horses, unloaded us, in our gunny sacks. I remember, he looked at us, then looked off, half bewildered, half mad. But he paid us out, from his own pocket. And he said, very loudly:

"What in the devil goes on around this place when my back is turned?"

• • • •

THERE ARE STORIES NOW, that hammer in my head, like the beating of car wheels on the rail joints in the long jumps from city to city. They ran through my mind, that night when I read Mr. Beal's story, while the light burned all night and Old Bill and Old Red quacked in the yard.

James The First

By Ross O'Donoghue

IT MAY BE SAID to the credit of the American reading public that at least in the last ten years factual biographies have met with the greatest success. Books that are packed with incident and in which the author wins the reader to his own interpretation of a character or a period by skillful marshaling of facts rather than by bald statements of theories are the vogue. This is as it should be, for not only is a truer picture likely to result, but also an infinitely more interesting narrative.

Unfortunately, the authors of a new book on King James I of England do not recognize the trend and have concocted a biography that is not lacking in scholarship but which depends too much on whimsical musings and conjecture. This gives the book a vagueness and unreality which is certainly not desirable in a work of history. It is much better when the space is used to tell what a man actually did rather than what the author believes he must have thought.

James, as he emerges from the pages of this volume is a proud man, thoroughly imbued with the doctrine of the divine right of kings, who was bewildered by his strange subjects who could never grasp the idea. A man of intelligence and ability, he had the courage, as a young man in Scotland, to face a pack of warring nobles and bring at least some semblance of order out of chaos. But in England, he always preferred the easiest way out, and, for example, got along without a parliament rather than deal with that refractory body. Comparative poverty was better than trouble, and peace abroad was better than national honor. It should be considered a tribute to some kind of ability on the part of James that he could allow England to drift for 22 years without disastrous results either at home or abroad. He escaped the results of his policy which were visited on his son.

The succession of handsome young men, who, while in favor ruled the country, is dwelt upon at length, but probably not more so than the facts require. The authors' conclusion is, however, that despite appearances, there was nothing abnormal about James. It was merely the case that pleasure was to him more important than work, and his person more important than England.

By the Associated Press.

Palmer, Alaska, May 15.—Matanuska project's manager announced today more than half the 168 families remaining in Alaska's drought refugee colony had contracted to buy the farms on which the Government placed them three years ago.

The manager, Leo B. Jacobs, disclosed this "first major step toward permanency," as colonists closed their annual celebration of the project's anniversary.

Jacobs said some first objected to purchase contracts, protesting they could not sell their homes even after ownership without consent of the Mantanuska Valley Co-operative Association. The manager said opposition faded when he explained their provision was to exclude "profiteers and other undesirables."

"Perhaps a dozen in all will refuse to sign," Jacobs said, "and these will be asked to leave. These will be undesirables."

He said the contracts contain usual conditional sales provisions, with clauses to protect the co-operative plan of the colony. Colonists have 30 years to pay, with annual instalments ranging from $80 to $330.

At the outset each family received 40 acres of land and credit averaging about $3,000. The credit was extended by a Government agency to allow them to buy food and supplies until they could establish their own facilities for making a living.

At the Colony Day celebration, preceded by a vaudeville show and dance, speakers described accomplishments since the original 200 families were brought here in May, 1935, from the Midwestern drought areas. A few new colonists have arrived.

Jacobs recently announced colonists would be "on their own" after next October 1 with discontinuance of Federal subsidies for the "security development program" under which they were being paid approximately $75 a month.

He said the crop outlook was good this year, with a $120,000 potential market in sight.

The planting season started two weeks earlier than last year. The demand for dairy products has exceeded the supply.

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart.

District jail employes must feel—so far as the clock and the calendar are concerned—but little better off than the prisoners they guard. The prisoners stay in the jail seven days a week and so do the guards.

There was another mild to-do about it the other day before the sub-committee of the District of Columbia Committee with Col. Charles I. Stengle, president, American Federation of Government Employes, and Representative Matthew Dunn, of Pennsylvania, as the speakers. Dunn is sponsor of H. R. 8674 which aims at improving the jail employes' hours, wages and general working conditions.

Dunn described his bill in detail and Col. Stengle supported it. Propping them were General Superintendent Huff, of the local institutions, and Supt. Rives, of the District Jail. The guards weren't there because they're never away from the jail—never, though come rain or sun or ball games or family ties or hearings of the proposition of giving them a few minutes off.

Huff related that the base salary for guards is $1,500 a year against $1,860 in the prison service. He said he would like to place them all on a 44-hour week, but this, of course, would entail added expense. And he spoke of the dimness of prospects for promotions at either Lorton or the District Jail.

Leave is on a basis of only 20 days a year, and 13 days of this time is administratively directed. Lorton employes average 50 hours a week and those at the District Jail do seven days a week.

Dunn grew ironical as he laid his papers on the table. The Government, he stated, is placed in an equivocal position when it permits its own employes to have duty tours of seven days a week when it is tring to get a 40-hour week accepted for industry. And the recitation began again: Some employes at the jail have had no salary increases in ten years. There were 20 employes at the District Jail who received $1,500 and 29 got more, but the latter group were the supervisors. He at least wanted to see the 44-hour week established.

The Dunn bill was offered as the hope.

In an unguarded and recent moment, this column pondered the startling question on the basis of recent findings by Federal scientists. The discovery was to the effect that the starlings roost or cavort by day in nearby Virginia and return of nights to Washington, to the annoyance of all. We merely intimated that the scientists should seek the reason for the starlings' return of nights, then remove the cause and the problem would be done with. To this, our friend H. P. Strople, of the G. A. O., replies:

"The starlings occupied the new buildings even before the help moved in, and the fact that they return nightly is simply that they are lonesome and, being city birds, like to mingle with the crowds, particularly in the theatrical districts.

"A search of the records will reveal that they get excellent protection in the District; they cannot be shot, poisoned, embarrassed or dispossessed. And they probably know it!

"The best thing to do is to forget about it; but if you are anxious for further research on the subject, you might find out what became of the project for inter-breeding the starlings with Brazilian homing pigeons, in the hope that some day they might obey their instinct and fly off to South America."

We've decided to forget it—but thanks for the letter.

Meetings by the N. F. F. E. for this week have been announced, as follows: Tuesday—12 noon, Civil Service Commission Branch Local 2 at Civil Service Commission; 8 p. m., General Accounting Office Branch Local 2, 710 Fourteenth street northwest; Wednesday—4 p. m., executive council Veterans Administration Branch Local 2, at Veterans Administration Building; 8 p. m., District of Columbia Federation of Federal Employe Unions, 710 Fourteenth street northwest; Friday—4:30 p. m., Bureau of Standards Local 280, at Bureau of Standards; 5 p. m., executive council Local 2, 710 Fourteenth street northwest.

The District of Columbia Federation of Federal Employe Unions will elect officers Wednesday night. Following the election, the new officers will be installed by one of the national officers. There will be musical entertainment and refreshments.

The Farm Credit chorus will present a program of spring music the evening of June 2 at the Departmental Conference rooms, Constitution avenue between Twelfth and Fourteenth streets. There will be no admission charge.

Chaplains' Group Meets Tomorrow

The Chaplains' Association will open its annual convention tomorrow at the Raleigh Hotel, with clergymen from every state of the union in attendance. The theme of the three-day meeting will be "Divine Worship as Conducted by Chaplains in the Army," with William R. Arnold, chief of chaplains, in charge.

Among speakers at the convention will be Gen. Malin Craig, chief of staff of the Army; Archbishop Curley, of Baltimore; Dr. Joseph R. Sizoo, vice president of the Federal Council of Churches, and the Rev. ZeBarney Phillips, chaplain of the Senate. The Rev. Arlington A. McCallum, rector of St. Paul's Church here, is president of the association.

Players to Introduce New Stage Technique

The King-Smith Playhouse will introduce a new stage technique to Washington next week when it presents "Penny Wise," a modern comedy, May 24, 25 and 26. The action will take place, not on the stage, but in the center of the auditorium. The audience will be seated in tiers around the playing area.

In announcing the innovation, Director Keinert Wolff explained that the technique originated in Europe and was brought to this country four seasons ago by the Penthouse Theater of the University of Washington.

Education Association Will Elect on Saturday

The Education Association of the District of Columbia will elect officers at its annual luncheon meeting at 2400 Sixteenth street at 12:30 p. m. Saturday. The speaker will be Mrs. Susan S. Alburtis, who will discuss "Getting Acquainted With Our Neighbors in South America." Music will be presented by an instrumental ensemble and group of student singers from McKinley High School.

Broadcasting Students Set Program Tomorrow

A drama program, arranged by students at the National Academy of Broadcasting, will be presented tomorrow night at the Cleveland Park Club. Plays, written by Elmer Patterson, publicity representative of the local Y. M. C. A., and C. H. Hastings, newspaper correspondent, will be presented. Mary Ware Goldman will give a lecture on "American Folk Music."

Osteopath to Speak.

Dr. Riley D. Moore, 1717 K street northwest, will be one of the principal speakers at the American Osteopathic Association convention in Cincinnati in July, it was announced yesterday. Dr. Moore will discuss "Osteopathic Gynecology" at a meeting of the osteopathic manipulative therapeutics section, one of the association's largest divisions.

Target Speedway Wanted by G-Men

By the Associated Press.

The G-men want a target range where they can machine gun dummy mobsters while roaring along in automobiles at 70 miles an hour.

J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, said today that a concrete speedway for such practice would be one of the features of a $126,000 pistol and rifle range proposed in a bill before Congress.

Marine Corps officials recently advised Hoover that increased use of the present range by Marines would prohibit its further use by the Justice Department's agents.

Rebel Bayonets Rout Foe From Key to Valencia

New Foothold Gained in Insurgents' Drive on Southern City.

By the Associated Press.

Hendaye, France, May 15.—A bayonet charge, which dislodged government militiamen from mile-high Mount San Cristobal today, gave Spain's insurgents a new foothold in their drive toward the main inland highway to Valencia and Castellon de la Plana.

A column driving south from Alepuz near the western, or Teruel, end of the scimitar-shaped front in eastern Spain, won the commanding position in the Sierra de Gudar preparatory to an attack on Mora de Rubielos, on the southern slopes of the Sierra.

Mora de Rubielos is on a secondary road running south to intersect the Teruel-to-the-sea highway at a point about 40 miles northwest of Sagunto.

Called Key to Valencia.

The highway from there to Sagunto runs through fairly level terrain and at Sagunto connects with the main coastal roadway between Castellon de la Plana to the north and Valencia to the south.

The Sierra de Gudar, one of several ridges which have made the struggle on the eastern front a complex war of positions, long has been considered the key to the government's defense of the inland approach to Valencia.

90,000 Taken by Rebels.

Insurgent authorities announced that more than 90,000 government soldiers had been taken prisoner in the war up to April 27.

These did not include prisoners who passed voluntarily into the insurgent lines but only those taken under arms it was said. Since April 27, the announcement pointed out, the ranks of prisoners were greatly enlarged, with 2,000 taken in one day.

Of the 90,000 captured before April 27, it was announced about 10,000 were prosecuted on assination charges, 30,962 placed in labor battalions for road building and other public works, 6,997 employed in special services and 45,885 held in concentration camps.

In Barcelona Premier Juan Negrin assured the permanent commission of the Barcelona Cortes (Parliament) the war situation "is not such as to give rise to any pessimism whatever."

War Costs Million a Day.

Upon the basis of a Bank of Spain statement, foreign financial observers calculated the government had spent about $1,410,000 daily since July 17, 1936, the start of the civil war.

The statement showed expenditure of 9,956,858,860 paper pesetas since then—equivalent at the current rate to $587,454,672. Observers figured the government also spent 950,778,607 gold pesetas ($316,926,202) in the same period.

It was pointed out the government had not called for a public loan but had financed the war through borrowing from the bank of Spain and issuing paper currency.

200,000 Reported Trapped As Japan Enters Key Rail City

Japan

ward along the Tientsin-Pukow Railway from its base in Nanking for a fortnight, was going forward in fan-like formation along a line from Su-hsien, on the Tientsin-Pukow line, northeastward through Yungcheng and Tangshan.

One column of this wing, following a motor highway, was bombarding Chinese positions in the environs of Suchow. The right wing of this army has broken through the Lunghai line east of Suchow and joined the left wing of the second army, which has been driving toward Suchow from South Shantung Province.

The Lunghai line was cut at this point by a "dare-to-die" corps of an engineering regiment, which blew up a small bridge west of Sin-an-Chen, 60 miles east of Suchow.

The second army was pressing forward in columns along an arc northeast of Suchow. The left end of this arc rested on the Lunghai line south of Tancheng, its center was in Taierhchwang, and its right on the Tientsin-Pukow line just north of Suchow.

It appear part of Taierhchwang was in Chinese hands but this Chinese unit was surrounded.

Describing the situation in this sector, a Japanese spokesman said:

"In the Taierhchwang sector our forces occupied Pei-Lac-Kow, 8 miles west of Pi-Hsien, and also Changshan, midway between Taierhchwang and Pi-Hsien, thereby piercing the Chinese defenses between the grand canal and the Yi River. We are attacking Chinese units still holding a part of Pi-Hsien."

The third army had flanked Kweiteh, Chinese divisional headquarters on the Lunghai line west of Suchow, and was engaged with Chinese units at a dozen points north of the railway.

The fourth army, which fanned into the Suchow area from bases north of the Yellow River, also was engaged in a series of battles with retreating Chinese forces believed to include crack divisions of Gen. Chiang's army, attempting to withdraw westward.

One column of this army crossed the Yellow River from Pu-Yang and occupied Tsao-Chow. Part of it then drove along the highway to Kao-Chen and veered south, cutting the Lunghai line at Nichang, 35 miles east of Kaifeng. This operation outflanked Chinese divisional headquarters in Kweiteh from the north.

The Japanese spokesman said many Chinese soldiers were throwing away their uniforms and donning the garb of coolies. He said regiments were being split into small bands and that it appeared all the great Chinese army in the Suchow area—estimated last week by the Hankow war office at 800,000—"slowly is being dissipated."

"At least 200,000 of these troops will be annihilated," he said.

200,000 Cover Retreat.

Neutral observers believed Gen. Li and his German advisers fled Saturday night and that the Chinese succeeded in evacuating the best of their equipment to the westward, concentrating near Kaifeng.

The 200,000 soldiers left in the Suchow-Fu area were believed to be mostly provincials who have borne the brunt of the Japanese attack for weeks. The task of these troops was to cover the retreat of the main Chinese army and sell their lives as dearly as possible.

German advisers of the Chinese army were said to have planned and supervised the retreat. The rear guard troops were told to discard their uniforms and retreat in small groups to villages on Lake Hung-tze, south of Suchow. At the lake villages they will be re-outfitted as plain clothes guerrillas.

The Chinese war office in Hankow admitted the Japanese columns working westward from Nanking in the Yangtze Valley were making more progress. It was denied, however, that the Japanese had occupied all of Hofei, guerrilla headquarters in Anhwei Province.

Berlin Birth Bell Sped Up to Count Austria Babes, Too

Berlin, May 15 (AP).—This being German Mother's Day, the men who control the pealing of the "birth bell" in an ornamental clock tower on the Doenhoffplatz decided it was time to count Austrian as well as German births in the ringing.

Previously the bell rang 12 times every five minutes—once for each of 12 births every five minutes.

Adding births in Austria last year to those of Germany, it was computed 13 children were born every five minutes. Henceforth there will be 13 strokes.

Peru Gives Recognition.

Rome, May 15 (U.P.).—Peru today joined the rapidly expanding list of nations recognizing Italy's conquest of Ethiopia. The Peruvian minister, Jose Manzanilla, visited Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano at Chigi Palace and said he bore letters of credence to King Victor Emmanuel as Emperor of Ethiopia.

ing they recognized no chieftain but Cedillo.

Meanwhile in Mexico City labor and political organizations lined up behind President Cardenas in support of his diplomatic rupture with Great Britain.

The congress of the Revolutionary (government) Party, the Confederation of Mexican Workers and other labor organizations joined in declaring themselves behind Cardenas and his "Mexico for Mexicans" program.

Britain Called Meddler.

In a sharply worded statement, the Revolutionary Party said the "meddling Britain attempted was in every sense intolerable."

The government-supported newspaper, El Nacional, told Britain "dwellers in glass houses should not throw stones."

Owen St. Clair O'Malley, Britain's Minister to Mexico City who was recalled last night, was packing to leave for home.

The majority bloc in the Senate sent the Interparliamentary Union at Geneva a lengthy defense of the oil expropriation, assailing Britain's representations as "offensive to the dignity and national sovereignty of Mexico."

Diplomatic quarters agreed the mass of Mexican people was behind Cardenas, but that commerce lamented the presidential action in adding international problems to the country's already heavy load of domestic trouble.

Britain Needs War Oil.

By the Associated Press.

London, May 15.—The British government, already deeply concerned over the European and Far Eastern situations, considered warily today what course to adopt toward its new worry—ruptured diplomatic relations with Mexico.

Viscount Halifax, Britain's foreign secretary, began study of the problem after returning from Geneva where he engineered the British about-face to recognize Italy's conquest of Ethiopia.

13 Nations Show Planes.

Helsingfors, Finland, May 15 (U.P.). The biggest aircraft exhibition ever held in Scandinavia was opened today under auspices of the Finnish Air Defense League. Thirteen nations, including the United States, entered exhibits.

Henlein Back, Satisfied With Talks in Britain

Czechs Share His Optimism in Belief Sudeten Tension Has Been Eased.

By the Associated Press.

Prague, May 15.—Konrad Henlein, chief of Czechoslovakia's Sudeten German minority, returned from London today saying his two-day talks with British leaders had "very satisfactory results."

The Nazi leader declined to reveal reasons for his satisfaction, but informed Czech circles shared his optimism in the belief tension had been eased over the problem of the 3,500,000 Germans in Czechoslovakia.

It was believed Henlein had been urged on all sides to use moderation in his demands for Sudeten German autonomy.

The government virtually has completed its draft of a new minorities statute, intended to pacify Henlein and his followers, and Premier Hodza intends to discuss it with Henlein before submitting it to Parliament.

It was believed the German leader would ask time to consider the measure, and in view of this the premier's broadcast to the nation, announced for May 20, would be postponed a few days.

Far-reaching concessions to the Sudeten Germans, particularly in the matter of language requirements, were expected to be made.

It was believed German would be permitted in courts of two provinces—Bohemia and Moravia—whereas heretofore this has been permitted only in localities with more than 20 per cent German population.

In addition, civil service posts would be apportioned on a basis of the nationality ratio, resulting in virtual home rule for many districts predominantly German. Government supplies would be distributed on an equal basis to Germans and others, and German unemployed given consideration on public works programs.

As a check, it was understood there would be guarantees for non-Germans within the purely Germanic areas, thus safeguarding Jews from discrimination.

There was no indication, however, the Government would yield to Henlein's demands for a change in Czechoslovakia's foreign policy of alliances with France and Russia.

Duce's Talk Slows Paris Envoy Choice

France

fended before the League of Nations Council last week.

The Italo-French talks in Rome, on the pattern of the recent Anglo-Italian pact, have been suspended over the week-end because Count Galeazzo Ciano, Italian foreign minister, accompanied Il Duce to Genoa for the premier's Saturday speech. Ciano is expected to resume consultations with Jules F. Blondel, French charge d'affaires, Tuesday or Wednesday.

May Delay Naming Envoy.

In view of Mussolini's publicly expressed doubts on the subject of Italo-French rapprochement, however, government circles believed the cabinet of Premier Daladier might delay the definite naming of a new Ambassador to Rome until France could be assured the friendship talks would succeed, with an accord containing Italy's pledge of maintenance of the Mediterranean status quo.

It was admitted any hopes pro-Italian French quarters might have held for a possible revival of the Stresa front—France, Britain and Italy pledged to maintain the status quo in Europe—were shattered by Mussolini's statement that "Stresa is dead and buried and so far as we are concerned, never can be resuscitated."

Former Boston Teacher Put in Spaak Cabinet

Paul Heymans Appointed Economic Minister in Belgium's Crisis.

By the Associated Press.

Brussels, May 15.—Paul Henri Spaak, 39, Moderate Socialist, formed an 11-man cabinet today with a former Massachusetts Institute of Technology professor as one of two key ministers entrusted with the nation's pressing financial problems.

He drafted back into the finance ministry Max Leo Gerard, liberal conservative economist, who checked a money panic in 1936 during the first government of Paul Van Zeeland.

The other key ministry, the combined economic and agriculture department, was assigned to Paul Heymans, a Catholic, banker, engineer and professor at Massachusetts Institute of Technology from 1924 to 1926.

Cabinet a Mixture.

The new cabinet, succeeding the ministry of Paul Emile Janson, which resigned Friday, contains four Socialists, four Catholics, two Liberals and one nonparty member.

Spaak, who took over the government in the midst of a rapid flight of gold, became Belgium's youngest and first Socialist prime minister. He retained the foreign portfolio he held in the last cabinet. Gen. Henri Denis retained the national defense portfolio.

The cabinet was faced with the loss of more than $113,000,000 worth of gold from the country during the last week's political crisis.

Deficit Faces Nation.

It was a fight over finances that ended Janson's premiership. With a budget deficit of $40,000,000 confronting the nation, Catholics insisted on drastic cuts in governmental spending while socialists sought fresh taxation.

The new cabinet's program was expected to be determined at a meeting tomorrow for presentation to Parliament Tuesday.

40,000 Pledge Horthy Aid.

Budapest, May 15 (AP).—Forty thousand war veterans in a progovernment rally pledged their loyalty today to Admiral Nicholas Horthy, Hungary's regent, and promised vigorous support of the new cabinet's efforts to suppress political extremists.

Several dozen Nazis, who had smuggled themselves into the rally shouted their slogan, "courage," at the first mention of Horthy's name, but were thrown out.

Speakers said the veterans' patriotic program was "work and bread for every citizen; restoration of the 1,000-year-old boundaries of Hungary . . .; one flag, the Hungarian flag; one leader, Regent Horthy; one aim—a Christian, national, independent greater Hungary."

Latvians Here Observe National 'Regeneration'

Bilmanises Hold Celebration of 4 Years' Progress Since Elimination of Political Parties; Mrs. Hull, Miss Wang, Hurbans Attend.

Washingtonians are used to celebrating king's birthdays and independence days of other nations, but yesterday they met at the Latvian Legation to celebrate a country's "regeneration."

On May 15, 1934, the Parliament and all 27 political parties in that country were abolished to avert possible civil war between armed left-wing and Fascist organizations. Thus no political party exists today in Latvia; instead, delegates to the legislature are elected through a chamber system along guild lines. The legation here states progress made by Latvia both economically and politically since May 15 four years ago is reason for celebration.

Minister's Wife Wears Native Dress

Instead of the usual floor length afternoon gown which hostesses wear at Capital functions, Mme. Bilmanis, the Minister's wife, was attired in r . tional costume, which has been in her family for several generations.

Over a red skirt, made on dirndl lines, she wore a linen blouse anu a little jacket heavily embroidered in black wool. Around her neck was an amber necklace and heavy silver ornaments. A headdress of gold and sparkling stones completed her costume.

The party was held in the legation on Decatur place, which the Minister and his wife have occupied since the winter. The drawing room walls are hung with oils from the Minister's collection of paintings, and much of the furniture was made in his country.

Red and White Peonies Decorate Rooms

The red of the damask curtains was accented by bowls of rose and white peonies. The dining room table was centered with African daisies and pink roses. Mme. Smits, wife of the secretary of the legation, poured tea, wearing a blue and white printed frock.

Callers during the afternoon included Mrs. Cordell Hull, wife of the Secretary of State, who wore a brown ensemble with hat to match; Miss Yoeh Wang, daughter of the Chinese Ambassador, in native costume; Baroness von Below, whose black and white print was topped off by a turban to match; the Czechoslovakian Minister and Mme. Hurban; the Counselor of the Czechoslovakian Legation and Mme. Brejska; the Secretary and Mme. Kabelac; Mr. and Mrs. Lothrop Stoddard; Miss Margaret Delano Gage, Mr. and Mrs. Ricardo Alfaro; the Peruvian Ambassador, Manuel de Freyre y Santander; Wilhelm Eickhoff, counselor of the Danish legation; the Minister of Guatemala and Senora de Recinos; Mr. and Mrs. Leo Pasvolsky; Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman; the Turkish Ambassador, Mehmet Munir Ertegun, and Dr. Leo S. Rowe, director general of the Pan American Union.

Walton Moore Gives Party at Fairfax Home

Although inclement weather changed R. Walton Moore's party from a garden to a drawing-room affair, nearly 200 persons motored yesterday to his country home in fairfax for the event. Receiving with the Counselor of the State Department were the Misses Margaret and Jennie Moore, his sisters.

The Moores give this party annually so that their friends can enjoy their gardens, which are extensive and in full bloom at this time of their year.

The hosts were assisted by a number of friends and five students of Sweetbriar College. A number of Judge Moore's colleagues from the State Department called, among them the Secretary of State and Mrs. Cordell Hull; the Undersecretary and Mrs. Sumner Welles, the Assistant Secretary and Mrs. Francis B. Sayre, G. Howland Shaw and Mr. and Mrs. Green Hackworth.

Others present were Sir Ronald Lindsay, British Ambassador; the German Ambassador and Frau Lieckoff, the Russian Ambassador and Mme. Troyanovsky, Justice and Mrs. Stanley Reed, Senator and Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg, and Senator and Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis.

Out-of-Towners Feted Here After Fahnestock Debut

Out-of-town guests who came here for the debut party of Miss Fontaine Fahnestock on Saturday evening were feted at a number of places yesterday.

In the afternoon James M. Beck, brother of Mrs. Snowden Fahnestock, entertained for Mr. and Mrs. Howard Cushing, of New York and Newport, who spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. C. Mathews Dick.

Several guests from other cities attended the dinner given by Mrs. S. Kent Legare at her residence on S street. Mr. and Mrs. John Hanes also entertained at dinner last evening.

Dance Planned By Carolinians

Cotton Ball and Style Show Will Be Given on Thursday Night.

Fifteen hundred invitations printed on cotton paper, made by a new process and already widely used, have gone out to South Carolinians in and near Washington to attend the cotton ball and style show of the South Carolina Society at the Wardman Park Hotel on Thursday night.

Among guests will be Miss Dorothy Moore, this year's Azalea Queen, who will arrive here the first of the week. Miss Moore presided over the Azalea Festival held last month in Charleston.

One of the features of the evening will be an elaborate cotton fashion show to be staged by the Cotton Textile Institute of New York City, against a background of cotton bales and colorful cotton exhibits. The show, to be directed by Miss Catherine Eloise Cleveland, will present 45 models ranging from gay spectator sports and beach ensembles to a picturesque bridal party. The part of the little flower girl, who will be attired as a miniature bride in white corded net, will be taken by 7-year-old Patsy Jackson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Jackson.

Seated on huge cotton bales, small colored boys, in overalls and straw hats, will welcome the guests as they arrive, with Southern tunes on mouth harps, banjos and gazoots. Colored mammies will be in evidence and Southern belles in cotton frocks will dance later to the more modern tunes of an eight-piece orchestra.

The cotton displays, furnished by the outstanding cotton textile manufacturers of South Carolina, and including everything from boxes of writing paper made of cotton to beautiful chenille bedspreads, will be given away during the evening as door prizes.

C.D.A. Will Install Officers Tomorrow

Installation ceremonies for the newly elected officers of Court District of Columbia, Catholic Daughters of America, will be held tomorrow evening at the Willard Hotel. The installing officer will be Miss Augusta E. Uhl, territorial deputy for the District of Columbia.

Following the installation there will be a social hour and a program at which the C. D. A. Glee Club, under the direction of Harry Walsh, will sing and speakers will be the Rev. John K. Cartwright, chaplain of the court, and the Rev. A. J. Burggraff, C. S. P. spiritual director of the Convert League.

On Friday evening, May 27, a benefit party will be held at the Immaculate Conception School Hall, the proceeds of which will be given to the Missionary Fathers of the Holy Trinity.

Preparations are being made by the Convert League, under the chairmanship of Miss Florence M. Winter, for a meeting June 12, when the Rev. Francis P. Lyons, C. S. P., wil lbe the principal speaker.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

STEPPING OFF the train from Cleveland at 5:55 p. m. yesterday, the Abbey Players arrived breathless at 6:20 at the home of the Charge d'Affaires of the Irish Legation, where a cocktail party in their honor was well under way. To add to the hectic atmosphere, the players had discovered when they stopped by their hotel en route that the promotion manager had absentmindedly engaged rooms for everybody, but two of the most important stars. These two—Miss Maureen Dulaney and Miss Mae Craig—finally straightened things out and arrived at the party only a little more breathless than the others.

DUDLEY HARMON.

Irish brogues and Irish whisky were everywhere at the home of the Robert Brennans. Mr. Brennan, who is rumored for the post of Minister here, first saw the Abbey Players 20 years ago in Dublin, and greeted several members of the cast who had been playing juvenile roles in those days.

* * * *

MOST OF the actors have been to Washington several times before. This is their last stop on their American tour before they return to Ireland a week from Saturday. Mr. O'Higgins, the director, said the cast was pretty well "flattened out," not so much from trouping as from attending parties given in their honor all over the United States.

One of the stars present was Miss Ria Moonay, who played the leading role in the first production of "Juno and the Paycock," when, at the Abbey Theater in 1926, it had its debut. At that time the Irish Republican Party objected to certain aspects of her role and threatened her life and that of her family if she didn't give it up. But she carried on, and lived to tell the tale.

* * * *

THE THREE DAUGHTERS of the house who are named after Irish queens—Merve, Deirdre and Eme—assisted.

Among other guests were the Attorney General and Mrs. Homer S. Cummings; Mr. and Mrs. Jouett Shouse, who will sail the middle of July, not in June, as previously reported, for Europe; Mr. and Mrs. Drew Pearson, Harold Horan, the South African Minister and Mrs. William Close, and the Third Secretary of the French Embassy and Mme. Charles Lucet. The Lucets will go to Gallipolis, Ohio, next Friday, as Charles is scheduled to make an address there.

Mrs. Ned Brunson Harris also was present, accompanied by Mrs. Douglas Anderson, of Pittsburgh. Mrs. Harris is president of the Washington Newspaper Women's Club, which is sponsoring a benefit performance of the Abbey Players tonight for the bed the club maintains at the Children's Hospital. Later the group will entertain the actors at a reception at the Admiral.

BACHELOR NEWS: Baron Paul Schell, of the Hungarian Legation, will return the first of June from his country . . . Edward Weintal, formerly with the Polish Embassy, and now a newspaper man, will leave in July for a vacation in Warsaw.

Horse Show Set At Fort Myer

Mrs. Wainwright, Wife of Commandant, Heads Committee.

Mrs. Jonathan M. Wainwright, wife of the commandant at Fort Myer, heads the women's committee working for the Army Relief Horse Show to be held in the Fort Myer Gardens on Sunday, May 29, from 9:30 a. m. throughout the day.

Lunch will be served on the grounds by a committee of which Mrs. William C. Crane is chairman. She will be assisted by Mrs. John Nash, Miss Marian Reybold, Mrs. George Barnes, Mrs. I. L. Kitts, Mrs. James Quill, Mrs. C. M. Iseley, Mrs. W. J. Powers, Mrs. R. A. Cavanaugh, and Mrs. F. A. Garrecht.

Other committee members include Mrs. Albert Kenner, Mrs. C. M. Downs, Mrs. C. B. McClennad, Mrs. Milton Boone, Mrs. C. L. Taylor, Mrs. J. R. Sperry, Mrs. John Millikin, Mrs. John L. Hines, Mrs. L. D. Carter, Mrs. L. G. Smith, Mrs. H. A. Luebbermann, Mrs. A. W. Roffe, Mrs. T. Q. Donaldson, Mrs. I. J. H. Trapnell, Mrs. W. J. Maroney, Miss Mary Crane, Miss Frances Roffe and Miss Beryl Summers.

Mrs. Garner To Visit Lindens

Mrs. John Nance Garner, wife of the Vice President, is among distinguished residents expected to be present tomorrow afternoon, when The Lindens, home of Mr. and Mrs. George M. Morris, is opened for the benefit of Stratford Hall, birthplace of Robert E. Lee.

Others who have taken tickets for the benefit, which will be repeated Wednesday, are Mrs. Charles Evans Hughes, Mrs. Cordell Hull, Mrs. Key Pittman, Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg, Mrs. Morris Sheppard and Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt.

The Lindens, which was first built 184 years ago, was moved from Danvers, Mass., by Mr. and Mrs. Morris and set up on Kalorama Circle here. It became their property in 1935, when the drawing room had already been sold to the Kansas City Museum, and the Colonial Dames and the Society for the Preservation of New England Antiquities were unable to raise funds for its restoration.

Luncheons Held In D. C. Suburbs

Among those who entertained were Mr. and Mrs. Charles Carroll Glover, jr., who had a number of friends lunching with them at Bayfields in Maryland.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Burling also gave a luncheon yesterday at their camp near McLean, Va.

Some 35 Washington residents motored to Oakland Plantation, beyond Frederick, Md., yesterday to lunch with Mr. and Mrs. Carlos del Mar, who spent the week-end at their place there. The Governor of Maryland and Mrs. Harry Nice were among guests, and others in the party were the Minister of Finland and Mme. Jarnefelt, the Minister of Czechoslovakia and Mme. Hurban, the Minister of Bulgaria and Mme. Naoumoff, the Counselor of the Cuban Embassy and Senora de Baron, and the Commercial Counselor of the British Embassy and Mrs. H. O. Chalkley.

* * * *

Mrs. William H. King, wife of Senator King, of Utah, will be ranking guest at the installation banquet to be given by the D. C. Alpha Chapter of Delta Theta Chi national sorority at the Carlton this evening.

Miss Mary Anna Kauffman, member of the national executive council of the sorority, who is here from Chicago, is in charge of arrangements for the dinner. Several members from Virginia Alpha Chapter in Richmond will attend.

Notables Will Attend Civic Concert Tuesday

Music enthusiasts are showing much interest in the reorganized Washington Civic Orchestra, which tomorrow evening, will give its second concert of the season, directed by Kurt Hetzel.

Mrs. C. C. Broy In Spotlight at Forrest Party

Wife of U. S. Brussels Consul Supported as Envoy to Russia.

"Is it true what they say about Russia—and you?" was a question those at Mrs. Randolph Keith Forrest's supper party last evening asked one of the guests of honor, Mrs. Charles C. Broy. The rumor is that for the first time in history a woman is under serious consideration for appointment as ambassador to a major diplomatic post, and that woman happens to be Mrs. Broy.

Wife of the United States Consul at Brussels, Mrs. Broy has been recommended by Senator Key Pittman, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, for the post at Moscow left vacant by Joseph Davies' appointment as Ambassador to Belgium. Leaders in both the House and Senate have said that if she were named by the President her nomination would be confirmed.

Visits Mother And Sister Here

Mrs. Broy was educated in Washington, where she was a public school teacher and community worker from 1910 until her marriage in 1923 to Representative Sisson, of Mississippi, who died the same year. She speaks German, French and Russian and has had an opportunity to observe life in foreign capitals since her marriage to Mr. Broy. The mother of three children who are at school in Brussells, she is visiting her mother, Mrs. Jacob Anderson Norton, and her sister, Mrs. Golder Norton Kimmel, at the Wardman Park Hotel.

The party given last evening by Mrs. Forrest at her home in Georgetown was also in honor of her son-in-law and daughter, Lieut. and Mrs. Thomas J. Thornhill, jr. Lieut. Thornhill is scheduled to leave shortly to join the fleet and his wife and four children will reside at San Diego during his tour of duty.

Several Friends Assist Mrs. Forrest

Assisting the hostess last evening were Mrs. William Sturtevant Moore, Mrs. Fulton Lewis and Mrs. Forrest Cornwell. Mrs. Forrest wore black chiffon with a bolero of ecru lace; Mrs. Thornhill was in pink chiffon and Mrs. Broy had chosen navy blue crepe with an embroidered organdy jacket and a large blue picture hat.

Among guests were Senator and Mrs. F. Ryan Duffy, Capt. John O'Leary, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kappler and Miss Suzanne Kappler, Mrs. Kimmel, Dr. and Mrs. Philip Sidney Smith, Dr. and Mrs. John H. Lyons, Mr. and Mrs. Philip Buck, Mrs. Thomas Henry Clay Reed, Mrs. James Carroll Frazer, Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Berryman, Mr. and Mrs. Fulton Lewis, jr., Dr. and Mrs. Frank Ashbrook, Mr. and Mrs. Eli Bamford Smith, Miss Mary B. Adams, Mrs. Charles S. Alden, Miss Sibyl Baker, Mrs. Beale R. Howard, Mrs. Frank Bennett, Miss Janet Richards, Mrs. Alfred H. Brooks, Mrs. Theodore J. Pickett, Mrs. E. K. Peeples, Miss Rose Mary Shea and Miss Margaret Shea.

May 26 Is Selected By Moira Archbold For Wedding Here

Miss Moira Archbold, daughter of Mrs. Anne Archbold, of Washington, has selected Thursday, May 26, as the date of her wedding to Nicol Smith, of San Francisco and San Mateo, Calif. After the wedding the couple will live in San Francisco.

Mr. Smith is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hays Smith, who are expected to come to Washington for the wedding. He is president of the Bachelors Club of San Francisco.

Woodrings to Return.

The Secretary of War and Mrs. Harry H. Woodring returned yesterday from a brief stay in Hutchinson, Kans., where the Secretary addressed a convention of bankers.

Peppers Return.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, May 15.

THIS TOWN IS cluttered with party-tossers, from the gem-studded semipublic orgies of the desperate rich to the little round of stud poker for "a few of the girls." But, owing to their long experience, I think that movie stars of the old school hurl the fanciest and biggest brawls, thanks to their long training in the old silent days when thousand dollar bills sprouted from every gooseberry bush in Hollywood.

ALICE HUGHES

At any rate, so went the party given by Mary Pickford to bow in her new cosmetics line, briefly noted here the other day. It rates more, for, to be profane about it, it was a jim-dandy. Mary took five suites at the nifty Hampshire House, and everybody came. Champagne corks popped, morbid waiters passed dainty snips, from caviar to olives. Mary, looking tanned, pretty, but a bit too plumpish, presided with the old Pickfordian grace. As for her jars and bottles, Mary told me, "I just want to make sweet, natural and simple cosmetics in plain packages for people who want to look as my movie friends and I have learned to look." Well, if you do that, baby, you're a shoo-in!

Guest Jannette MacDonald is lovelier than you could dream, and sweet and friendly. Sixty guesses what she calls Husband Gene Raymond. Wrong. "Poppa." Yes, "Poppa." She wore a beautiful black dress, with a big black hat. What a picture! Gloria Swanson, Lynn Montanne, Dorothy Gish, Ethel Merman and Jimmy and Betty Compton Walker were other turner-uppers. Such gabbing. Quite the nicest racket of spring—and good luck to Mary and her doodads!

The lady authors are knocking out the little gems like mad. Martha Dodd, daughter of the former Ambassador to the Third Reich, has just given off an article on Nazi Germany, and Sally Benson has a new book of short pieces coming in June, and Clare Newberry is in town from Michigan with a new book about a spaniel . . .

Murray Hill was so excited the other day, Mayor "Little Flower" LaGuardia arrived to visit our outdoor sculpture show and again proved his honesty by freely admitting that this modern sculping is so much broccoli to him. It is to most people, but most people won't admit it, preferring to try a bluff and sound cultured! Pooh to them!

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

What to Do? Asks Tenants Told to Move for Not Asking Landlord's Daughter to Their Son's Party.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am married and have two small children. We rent the little house we live in from a man my husband's age, whom he has known for years and used to go around with before we were married. The house is situated not far from the one in which he lives, with his wife and small daughter. We have had several misunderstandings in the past, that were ironed out but now something has come up which worries me greatly.

• • • •

On April 30, my 5-year-old son had a birthday party, to which I let him invite five guests, of his own choosing. He didn't invite this man's small daughter and a few days later this man told my husband we would have to move, for the reason that he didn't "like the idea of our son having a party and not inviting his small daughter." He said he thought I was "being spiteful." Furthermore, his wife has told me that because her child was not invited, I am no longer welcome in her home. And yet, their child was asked to share ice cream and cake with our son on his fourth birthday. At that time, I was expecting another child and didn't feel equal to the effort of planning a party, so we had this little girl only.

• • • •

To me, all this seems very childish, as I feel it is our privilege to invite whom we choose. You can't always have everyone you would like, every time, and they have had several parties to which we were not invited. Last summer, furthermore, his wife had several neighboring couples spend a week as her guests at her father-in-law's summer cottage at the beach, and I was not invited. However, as my second child was only a month old at the time, I supposed she had assumed I couldn't get away; certainly I never thought of her as being "spiteful" or deliberately slighting me . . . I don't like having them angry at us, and do you think there is something my husband or I could do?

• • • •

The young man's father, with whom he is in business, has been very kind to us, giving my husband helpful advice and acting more like a father to him than his own father. We wouldn't want this to hurt him in anyway, or to cause him to feel ill will toward us. Before all this came up we had told the couple we were planning to build our own home soon and would be moving out eventually. We suggested another couple who would like to have their house. Do you suppose they want to change tenants immediately and are only using this as an excuse? Or are they sincere in believing the party incident an insult? We need your sincere opinion and advice. T. C.

• • • •

Absurd Command.

DEAR T. C.: It is almost incredible that grown-ups who had known any social and educational advantages whatsoever (and more particularly the kind which two generations of financial security would imply) could revert to so primitive, so savage, so infantile a level of thought, feeling and behavior as you herewith impute to your landlord and his lady. One is being rude and impertinent—not to mention ignorant—in the extreme, when he challenges another's failure to include him on a given party guest list.

• • • •

The fact that you have known someone for years, or chance to be living in leased property of his ownership, gives him no special claim to your hospitality. Whom we ask to our homes is as much our private and personal affair as the food we choose for our tables, as the garments we choose for our backs, the schools we choose for our children, or the furnishings we choose for our rooms. It is, in other words, nobody's business but our very own, and whoever presumes gratuitously to question our motives for selecting this as against that—or one guest as against a potential other guest—is placing himself outside the pale of well-bred social tolerance.

• • • •

The greatest mistake you could make, considering the type of persons you are dealing with, would be to apologize further for your son's failure to ask the landlord's daughter to his party. Let them think whatever they wish to think, since it is an absolute impossibility to reason with ignorant, underbred, hypersensitive persons who permit their material possessions to make them feudal-minded. In considering themselves "spitefully slighted," they are coloring a transparently innocent episode with the jaundice of their own unnatural social viewpoint.

• • • •

By exercising one's imagination to the utmost, one can vizualize a petty-minded woman's having such a reaction, but one can hardly picture a man's sharing and aggressively championing such a kindergarten or jungle attitude. Men, as a rule, are rather blandly impervious to, and sardonically skeptical of, the "little woman's" vengeful reasons for wishing to boycott a given neighbor.

• • • •

The average man would tell her she was making a mountain out of a mole hill; that she'd better "pipe down," "keep her neck in;" that this is a world where it's wise to "live and let live," that what the Smiths do is their business, thank God, and no rightful concern of his or hers; that "things around this house might be a heck of a sight better if she'd tend to her own knitting a little more closely and stop looking over the fence for trouble;" and, finally, that if Jane can't get herself invited to a party, it must mean that something about her own personality and manners is at fault; and how's for looking into the matter and giving Mrs. Smith and Johnnie a rest? The kind of man who would not, automatically and involuntarily, take this attitude is the sort of man one calls "an old woman."

• • • •

If your landlord's father is a man of good sense (as he seems to be) he will see the episode for the tempest in the teapot it really is. If he cannot see it for himself, in that light, I feel explanation would be futile. If he brings up the question (which he may do, in jocular or troubled vein) then, and only then, tell him how you deplore the situation that has arisen, and how thoughtless and unintentional was your contribution to it.

• • • •

The absurdity of your landlord's behavior remains the same, whether he actually is incensed over the party episode, or whether he is merely using it as a pretext for vacating the property. However, don't let him give you the "bum's rush." If it isn't convenient to vacate immediately, get expert legal opinion concerning your tenant rights, which are ample and leisurely. So long as your rent is regularly paid in advance, on or before the first of the month, he will not find it a simple matter to put you out. M. H.

Down With the Glare.

Every day is Sun-Day now. That brings the need for window decorations that invite the sunlight indoors but, at the same time, tone down the glare. Over fresh window shades or Venetian blinds hang up lace net curtains with their airily cool open weaves. They'll let in all the sunlight and air that you wish but the room will be comfortably light—not glaringly sunny.

Hanging Note.

Convention Report.

PRESIDENT—We will now hear the report of Mrs. Gadd, the delegate to our national convention.

MRS. GADD—Madam president and ladies: In making this report I am just going to begin at the beginning. But first I want to say that it was the most inspirational meeting I ever attended. The ladies of the town were simply lovely. When we got in there Thursday afternoon at 4:15—no, I believe it was 4:24 . . . yes, I remember now, the train was exactly nine minutes late . . . Well anyway when we got in there, a delegation met us at the station and all the newspapers sent photographers—

MRS. POSEY—Were the pictures in the papers?

MRS. GADD—Yes. I have some clippings . . . somewhere here in my bag . . . just a minute now . . . if I can just lay my hands on them—

MRS. FLINT—I move that the report proceed.

PRESIDENT—Yes, I think we had better—

MRS. GADD—Well that night we ate our dinner at the hotel—and I want to say right here that the hotel people were simply lovely—and then we went to the opening reception. I wish you could have seen the decorations! Actually I NEVER saw such roses. And ladies I DO wish you could have seen Mrs. Bigger, our State president in the reception line. She simply looked lovely. She had on a beige net made with a flare skirt . . . it was backless, you know she has such lovely shoulders anyway . . . and how many corsages do you think she had? . . . SIX! Yes! She wore four and carried two. Really I never saw such LOVELY flowers in all my life. Well, I could just talk all day about the reception, but I must get on—oh, but I will tell you what they served. They had sherbet in our national club colors, blue and yellow, and little cakes with blue and yellow flowers on top in icing—wait, I believe I've got one in my bag!

PRESIDENT—Just a minute. Maybe we could come back to that later.

MRS. GADD—All right. Well the next morning we went to a breakfast for Mrs. Bounce our State candidate for assistant treasurer. I DO wish you could have seen the tables. Yellow daffodils and Japanese iris in silver vases and the place cards were little cardboard puppies—

MRS. FLINT—Madam President I move that we get on to the meeting.

MRS. GADD—All right. All right. Now just as soon as I get my notes straightened out . . . oh yes. Well we went into the meeting. They were late getting started because the newspaper photographers were there—

MRS. SMILEY—Were those pictures in the paper too?

PRESIDENT—Please proceed with the report.

MRS. GADD—Well first we had a lovely musical program. And the mayor gave a marvelous welcome and then Mrs. Powers, our national president, gave a perfectly marvelous address. She said we would all have to do more about government, and education and peace and everything. And then a Dr. Somebody from some university—wait a minute . . . I believe I've got him here in my bag . . .

MRS. FLINT—I rise to a point of order. The lunch hour is approaching.

MRS. GADD—All right I'll give you his name later. Well anyway he gave a marvelous message and got a wonderful ovation. Then we had the reports of the national officers. The president was first . . .

MRS. BATTLE—I move we don't go into the reports.

PRESIDENT—Go on with the meeting, Mrs. Gadd.

MRS. GADD—And then we had a lovely luncheon at the Masonic Hall given by the Chamber of Commerce. Mrs. Powers was presented with a corsage and every lady was given a gardenia. The food was lovely too . . . I've got the menu somewhere here in my bag—

MRS. FLINT—Question of privilege!

MRS. GADD—All right I'll find it later. Then right after luncheon we had the reports of the State chairmen. Alabama was first—

PRESIDENT—Suppose we postpone the details of the reports.

MRS. GADD—Oh, I forgot to tell you that before the reports we had a marvelous pageant on the lawn by the Neo-Corinthian dancers. Ladies I really must tell you about the pageant—

MRS. FLINT—Madam President it is past the lunch hour. I move that we adjourn.

MRS. GADD—Oh, but I'm not through the first day yet. I haven't told about the teas for the candidates and the motor tour and the visit to the noodle plant and the traveling case we gave Mrs. Powers—

MRS. POSEY—I move we continue the report at our next meeting.

MRS. BATTLE—I amend the motion to continue the report at our next two successive meetings.

MRS. SMILEY—Maybe to be on the safe side we'd better make it the next three meetings—

MRS. FLINT—I move we adjourn.

MRS. GADD—Oh, Madam President, wait a minute! I've found the newspaper clippings! . . . And the menu! . . . And the favor! . . . And the little cookie! All right here in my bag!

YOUR FIGURE, MADAME!

By Ida Jean Kain.

NOT EVEN A revolution is permitted to interrupt the old Spanish custom of a midday siesta. The Latins learned long ago that if a man lies down and rests awhile he can resume the battle with renewed enthusiasm.

It's too bad this practice is not applied by the average American businessman, who often feels he can barely spare 30 minutes for lunch. An adequate rest period would make him more efficient and would tend to prolong his life, but it seems to be a habit with the hard-pressed businessman to continue going through the motions of work long after he has ceased to work effectively.

More than one wise doctor has said that if the average man would flop down for 10 to 15 minutes when he feels that he has about reached the end of his rope, and could really relax during that time, his energies would be replenished and unnecessary nerve strain would be avoided. When we become overtired we draw upon our reserve energy to such an extent that more than a normal amount of rest is needed to revive the feeling of well-being. If we rest before we reach the stage of exhaustion we do not have to overcome this depletion of reserve energy.

Tension is the geratest factor in fatigue today. So many lawyers, editors, and, now, radio men, develop ulcers of the stomach that this by-product of high tension is associated with their professions. One of the radio executives tells me that practically all his men are on a modified sippy diet. Between announcements they dash around to the corner drug store for the glass of milk that will act as a buffer against nerve tension.

Every businessman needs a recreation that will allow him to relax more completely. It may be fishing, golf or tramping through the woods. One doctor with whom I talked went so far as to advise putting golf ahead of business. You will, no doubt, hoot at the idea, but from his experience with his own patients he predicts that the average businessman will get more work done when he is in the office if he has more hours for relaxation.

Adequate exercise aids relaxation by improving the muscular system and by taking your mind off your worries. It is impossible to brood about business and at the same time to give your opponent a lesson in golf.

For the man who needs to reduce, here is the man-size reducing menu—and the reminder that you don't need to overeat "to keep up your strength:"

Knitted Accessories.

Paris (U.P.).—Knitted accessories are rampant. The fad of wearing scarves Goya-like over the head is expressed in the tricot mode by fishnet scarves often weighted down with little balls or fishhooks. Gloves with each finger knitted in a different pastel are popular, and pouch bags are often knitted to match the costume.

Clean the Chopper.

Use a salad oil for lubricating the food chopper. Then there will be no danger of getting a disagreeable flavor in the food. Wash the chopper in hot water and plenty of soap suds and then rinse it in boiling water before using it.

Careful Grooming Is Thrift Habit, Says Stage Star

"It's economical to be well-groomed," says Penny Singleton, singing and dancing star. And she can prove it.

"First of all," she says, "clothes last longer if kept clean, so I have fallen into the habit of giving dresses, coats and hats a thorough brushing every time I take them off and putting them in the cleaner's bag the minute they are ready for it rather than hanging them back in the closet.

"I like to feel that everything in my closet is immediately wearable because it isn't thrifty to have to buy clothes on the spur of the moment due to the fact that the dress which would fit the occasion wasn't hemmed or sent to the cleaners when it should have been.

"One of the most important things in my dressing room is a drawer containing a half mitt which slips over the hand to clean felt and suede hats, a little sponge which makes suede bags and shoes look like new, a sewing kit used to tack up falling hems and splitting seams and a bottle of ammonia in which to soak jewelry which is losing its sparkle.

It's not necessary to say why—everyone in Washington knows the tuneful dance music, the tasty cocktails and pleasant atmosphere that distinguishes the Rainbow Room.

Dr. C.G. Maphis Dies; Famed as Va. Educator

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., May 15.—Dr. Charles Gilmore Maphis, professor of education and dean of the summer quarter at the University of Virginia and founder and director of the Institute of Public Affairs held annually at that institution, died suddenly last night at his home. He had been in ill-health for the past two years, following a stroke of paralysis.

Dr. Maphis was born February 12, 1865, at Edinburg, Shenandoah County, son of the late John Miley and Elizabeth Ann (Coffelt) Maphis. He graduated from Peabody College in 1886 and won his Ped. D. degree from Davidson College, N. C., in 1923, and in the same year Roanoke College conferred upon him the LL. D. degree.

He began his educational career as principal of the Strasburg High School in 1886, and was principal of the Harrisonburg High School from 1887 to 1890. For six years he was a member of the State board of school examiners, following which he became registrar of the summer quarter at the University of Virginia in 1905. Later he was appointed director and then dean of the summer quarter.

In 1911 he was appointed professor of education and from 1920 to 1925 was director of university extension work. He served as secretary of the Virginia Education Commission in 1910 and was a member of that body from 1918 to 1920. In 1927 he organized and became director of the Institute of Public Affairs, which position he held at the time of his death.

Dr. Maphis was executive dean of the third university world cruise, 1929-30; was director of personnel work for the Southeast Division, S. A. T. C., Commission on Education and Special Training, War Department.

For years he served as a member of the executive committee of the Co-operative Education Association of Virginia; was president of the Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools of Southern States, 1916-'19; secretary-treasurer of the Virginia Association of Colleges from 1915 to 1920; president of the Virginia State Teachers Association, 1916; president of the National University Extension Association, 1922-'23; chairman of the finance committee of the Southern Woman's Educational Alliance, 1924, and member of the Virginia Commission for the Blind.

Dr. Maphis was a fellow of the American Geography Society; member of the N. E. A., Southern Society, philosophy and psychology; Virginia Academy of Science; National Conference on Social Work; National Council of Boy Scouts of America. He was a Phi Beta Kappa and member of the Phi Delta Kappa and Pi Gamma Mu fraternities.

On October 14, 1890, Dr. Maphis married Miss Bessie Dold, daughter of the late Samuel Dold, of Harrisonburg, Va. She survives, with a son, Edwin Willis Maphis.

The funeral will be held at 4 o'clock tomorrow afternoon at the Presbyterian Church, the service to be conducted by the pastor, Rev. Dwight Moody Chalmers, assisted by the Rev. W. Kyle Smith, of the university. Interment will be in Riverview Cemetery.

Abdell Noticed Near Death Scene, Says Detective

Norfolk, Va., May 15.—Detective Leon Nowitzky tonight said J. Clifton Abdell had been idetnified at the city jail as the man seen at 9:30 a. m. Wednesday on the porch of his home where the body of his wife, Mrs. Audrey Sharpe Abdell, was found bruised and beaten in a gas-filled kitchen seven hours later.

Abdell, a merchandise broker, is held on a charge of murder growing out of the death of his 38-year-old wife. He claimed he was in Washington all day Wednesday, where he was notified in a hotel Wednesday night of his wife's death.

Nowitzky said he still intended to make another arrest, probably tomorrow, when he will confer again with Commonwealth's Attorney John M. Arnold.

Drunk Driving Sentence Delays Man's U. S. Tour

Turner A. Burns, 72, of 3223 M street northwest, who set out recently to see the country by automobile, was unavoidably detained a month soon after his journey began when he was sentenced yesterday for driving while intoxicated at Hagerstown, Md. Police, who said Burns' truck crashed into the parked car on a Hagerstown street Friday night, introduced in evidence a gallon of alleged moonshine whisky they said was found in the truck.

Boy of 3, Drunk, Taken to Hospital; Father Put in Cell

Three-year-old David E. Harris, jr., was in Gallinger Hospital last night, apparently suffering from alcoholism, and his father, David E. Harris, 28, of Lorton, Va., was in police custody.

Harris appeared at Sibley Hospital shortly after noon yesterday with the child. He asked for a private room and was advised to take the youngster to Gallinger.

Police were called to the municipal hospital and Harris was placed under arrest. He was not charged but was placed in a cell. Doctors said the boy probably would recover today.

A taxicab driver told Sibley attendants that Harris hailed him on Florida avenue northwest after he alighted from a truck and asked to be taken to a hospital. According to the driver, whose identity is undetermined, the father said the child had found some wine in the Harris home Saturday night.

Candidate's Father Slain in California

Bakersfield, Calif., May 15 (U.P.).—Mathias H. Warren, 70, father of E. Warren, district attorney of Alameda County, former Republican national committeeman, and candidate for attorney general of California, was found beaten to death today at his home.

Warren, a wealthy land-owner, lived alone. Police said he had no known enemies and usually left the doors unlocked.

Victims Picked Up by Nearby Craft in Severn Mishaps.

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., May 15.—Caught in a sudden gust of wind, three small sailboats participating in the Annapolis Yacht Club weekly race were tipped over in the mouth of the Severn River today.

Nearby craft rescued the six ducked sailors without trouble and pulled their boats ashore safely.

QUIZ FOR SECRETARIES No. 8

QUESTION: What is the quietest and simplest way to remove a finished letter from a machine?

ANSWER: Many operators grab a letter by the top and pull it out, making the platen roller whirr around with a "tearing paper" noise. Eliminate it by pressing the paper release or if more convenient, the ratchet release lever, thus removing pressure and allowing letter to slip out easily... and silently. Yours for quieter offices—the "Super-Speed" L C Smith.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

When a Congressman in the Capital comes home whistling "They Cut Down the Old Pine Tree" his wife can guess shrewdly that he's been at the ball game . . . It's the only tune they play at the American League ballpark.

Beatrice Gould . . . epochal?

Some of the foreign embassies in Washington use the diplomatic free-franking privilege on their social mail; but the White House puts stamps on its invitations. (If they didn't the Republicans would accuse 'em of something.)

* * * *

GILT OFF THE DOME: An earwitness tells me that Vice President Garner has referred to the President as "that hog-caller in the White House" . . . Because a few of the tobacco-chewers in the House are bad marksmen, some of the rugs have to be replaced every year or so.

"—one step to oblivion"

These last days of the session before the elections many Congressmen must perform prodigious feats of tight-wire walking . . . One false step may mean oblivion, with even inside Democrats reconciled to the loss of 50 or more seats this year. Pepper's victory on a Roosevelt-or-bust program has assumed an inordinate importance, and scores of members fear they have anti-Roosevelt votes in their records which must be explained.'

* * * *

That means 50 or more uphill, last-ditch campaigns; 50 families uncertain whether they'll hang their hats in Lone Tree or the Capital next January; 50 sets of children who don't know where they'll go to school; 50 housing problems in abeyance . . . What price glory now? That's why some Congressmen vote against a bill in the secrecy of the committee room or in the parliamentary underbrush of a motion to recommend, but will vote for it on final passage.

Diplomatic Daisy Harriman, our Minister to Norway, is regaling her friends with tales of the tantrum the Duchess threw when the Windsors were obliged to defer their visit to America. In a ladylike way, she virtually kicked and screamed.

Wally had set her heart on taking her ex-king to the States, and she thought it was unfair not only to have him exiled from England, but also to find herself, a free American girl, temporarily "exiled" from God's country.

"They treat him," said one-time Republican official, "as if he were merely the head of the Democratic Party and not as the President of the U. S. A., in command of the Ship of State. They could use a little urbanity to advantage."

Some of the statesmen feel that the anti-syphilis bill, which comes up in the House today, sponsored by Bulwinkle, of North Carolina, may become historically the most important achievement of this hectic era . . . Syphillis, they feel, is a more permanent problem than pump-priming.

That also is the opinion of beauteous, intense Beatrice Gould, who, with her husband, Bruce Gould, launched and heroically crusaded for the bill. (They edit the Ladies Home Journal.)

CAPITAL CAVIAR: Senator Vandenberg is only one of the statesmen rumored to be polishing up his elocution in readiness for the radio electioneering . . . Col. Knox is rated as the Republican with the best radio voice and technique . . . One of my favorite oracles thinks Justice Harlan Stone would be the best G. O. P. candidate in 1940, health and the proprieties permitting.

Showers Save Crops In St. Marys County

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Leonardtown, Md., May 15.—Heavy showers Friday and Saturday breaking the long continued drought in St. Marys County will save many thousands of dollars for the farmers here, especially the tobacco growers, which is the main crop of southern Maryland.

Still, in the beds, the young tobacco plants have been saved on many farms by water hauled some distance, and now are ready to be transplanted to the fields.

5 Nurses to Graduate.

Clarksburg, W. Va., May 15.—Dr. Nelson H. Thorn, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, will deliver the commencement address to five graduate nurses of the Union Protestant Hospital at a banquet Thursday evening. The graduates are Miss Greta Mae Sizer, Miss Virginia Cornwell, Miss Beulah Steerman, Miss Doris Musser and Mrs. Dyrldine Smith Duncan.

As result of a resolution "adopted unanimously by the Pages of the House of Representatives," 48 of the boys who run errands for the Nation's lawmakers assembled in "jovial and hungry mood" at the Mayflower Hotel last night for their sixth annual dinner. They were guests of Representative Joseph B. Shannon (Democrat), of Missouri.

Carefully dressed and well-scrubbed behind the ears, the lads from the cradle of politics behaved at their party much like the millions of other American boys who never tread the halls of Congress. They had a fine time and were sorry only that their host was unable to be present. Shannon was detained in Kansas City.

One of the youngsters, Robert B. (Lightning) Martin, of California, set the keynote for the evening when he protested at being served milk with his dinner. "I'm no sissy," he declared. "Give me iced tea."

With John McCabe, chief of the Republican cloakroom, acting as master of ceremonies, everything went off as scheduled. McCabe, who is 44 years old, was celebrating last night the nineteenth anniversary of his entrance into the page service. The boys like him as a boss, and he won a lot of applause when he entertained with a song-and-dance routine.

Like the men for whom they work in the House, the boys weren't very quiet when McCabe called the roll. The list of names was punctuated with such cries as "Will you give me a cookie, please?" and "Aw, sit down and keep quiet."

The first part of the entertainment program, a play called "Who Killed Who?" got hearty co-operation from the audience. The boys were all ready to cheer the hero and hiss the villain. The play was complicated by the frequent coming alive of the corpse, William ("The Glut") Smith, of Pennsylvania.

Another play, "The Kid Comes Back," was shorter and put its point over a little more clearly. A disturbance was heard behind a screen on which was painted the sign "Lion Tamer Wanted." Then, over the top of the screen came several bundles of old bones, salvaged by the pages from butcher shops.

"Lord," groaned McCabe when he saw the bones. I told them not to use those. They smell too to use those. They smell too much."

His agony ended when the actors, Albert Losche and John Dingell, marked up the sign so that it read "Lion Wanted."

Ayers, who lives at 1223 Holbrook Terrace northeast, was sailing in Washington Channel between Hains Point and Anacostia River when he crossed the bow of the larger boat.

Harbor police, who witnessed the collission, said the City of Washington signaled the Fancy Pants and swung to the right to clear the small craft. Ayers apparently failed to see the maneuver and swerved into the path of the excursion ship, which reversed its engines but could not prevent the collision.

Ayers, thrown into the water as the vessel capsized, was rescued by Policemen C. R. Spring and C. A. Parker, of the harbor patrol. He suffered from shock and a cut on his head.

Smithsonian Expert To Study S. A. Tribes

Dr. Julian Steward, Smithsonian Institution ethnologist, has left for South America to make an 18-month survey of three Indian tribes. Principal objective of his trip, according to the Smithsonian, is a study of the Araucanian Indians of Chile, who never have been under white dominance and thus probably have retained many of their ancient customs and beliefs.

The expedition also will include visits to the Otavalo Indians of northern Ecuador and to the Campas Indians of eastern Peru.

Church Drama Society To Stage Play Tomorrow

Players of the Mount Vernon Place Methodist Episcal Church South will present a play, "Bread," in the Salvation Army Hall, 606 E street northwest, at 8 p. m. tomorrow. The public is invited.

The Salvation Army will conduct a 12-day revival campaign in the parking garage of Hecht & Co. Wednesday through May 29. Open air services will be held at 8 p. m.

Sin's Wages Death Of Moral Power, Says E. J. Higgins

Declaring "the gift of God is eternal life," Edward J. Higgins, retired general of the Salvation Army, last night asserted the wages of sin "is the death of moral strength, lofty ambitions, conscience and opportunities of service."

The general spoke before 300 people attending a rally at the Salvation Army headquarters, 606 E street northwest. Maj. Charles Dodd, District commander of the Army, also spoke and conducted prayer services.

Today, Gen. Higgins will meet officers of the Salvation Army headquarters at 3 p. m. and 7:30 p. m. at 528 First street northwest. He will return to his home in Florida tonight or tomorrow.

Young Communist Unit Sets 'Sweet 16' Party

The Young Communist League will celebrate the sixteenth anniversary of its founding with a "Sweet Sixteen" party Friday at 8 p. m. at its headquarters, 509 G street northwest. Henry Winston will speak on the history of the league. Local members will present a play, "Alice in Naziland."

Plan Vote Motorcade.

The Washington Young Democratic Club of South Carolina will sponsor a motorcade to South Carolina July 2 for all persons desiring to register, Hergert Lane, president, announced yesterday. The party will return July 5.

Cleric Pleads For Honesty In Daily Life

Practices From 'Ghost Writing' to Buying Votes Assailed.

Dr. McCartney Asserts 'Wild Parties' Are Form of Stealing.

"Dishonest" practices of modern life, ranging from ghost writing to the purchase of votes with relief money, were assailed yesterday by Dr. Albert J. McCartney, pastor of Covenant-First Presbyterian Church.

Speaking on the Eighth Commandment, "Thou shalt not steal," Dr. McCartney pleaded for "individual integrity" in employer-employe relations, in home life, in advertising testimonials, in politics.

Dr. McCartney assured his congregation that "it will not be necessary for me to prod your consciences on purse stealing, or rent jumping, or income concealing . . .

"Parties" Held Stealing.

Pointing out, however, that "human ingenuity has become exceedingly skillful in subtle evasions" of the Eighth Commandment, Dr. McCartney said that "larceny is of three classes; petty larceny, grand larceny and glorious larceny. It is glorious larceny when a man steals upon such a large scale that we overlook his rascality in our amazement at the genius he has displayed."

The habit of "late nights, wild parties and occasional dissipation" Dr. McCartney classified as "stealing from your employer." He said that "if we do not come to our work in the morning fully equipped, we are . . . dishonest."

Employers also sometimes are guilty of dishonesty, Dr. McCarthy said. "It is nothing short of robbery for a wealthy, successful concern to accept the contribution of a faithful, honest, hard-working employe year after year without rewarding these virtues in as high financial terms as the income of the concern will warrant."

"Ghost Writing" Hit.

Dr. McCartney flayed the "dishonesty practiced by so many public men today in palming off to the public . . . addresses and articles that they are obviously not intellectually capable of writing and frequently do not even understand . . . Any minister who commits this wholesale robbery is quickly unfrocked and deposed," he added.

Referring to "dishonesty in politics," Dr. McCartney denounced the practice of "stealing" votes, "whether on the grand and glorious scale of relieving the poor and the unemployed, or by making a direct raid upon the public Treasury."

Dumbarton Methodist.

The church ought not "meddle in politics or economics," declared Dr. Walter F. Atkinson at Dumbarton Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church.

Asserting that the "supreme business" of the church is "revelation of the divine truth," Dr. Atkinson said, "If the church would attend to its own business, the world would not be in its present mess."

Cleveland Park Church.

"We find ourselves in a blind alley when we attempt to deny the resurrection of Jesus," said Dr. J. O. Knott at Cleveland Park Congregational Church.

"What the resurrection really was in essence" is important, he said. "The form which it took matters little. Jesus passed through death and the grave and came forth living in a new sphere and under new conditions."

Petworth Baptist.

"The church is the single institution of the world that is seeking the welfare of all men, hence it must have as its leaders men and women who hold to the importance and value of the cause," asserted the Rev. Harry J. Smith, pastor of Petworth Baptist Church, at the morning service.

Fifth Baptist Church.

Hitler, Mussolini, Stalin and Gandhi are the four men living today who bear the earmarks of the "anti-Christ," declared the Rev. Hugh S. Wallace, of Birmingham, Ala., preaching yesterday morning at the Fifth Baptist Church.

The visiting clergyman is in this city to confer with Senators Bailey and Reynolds and other members of the North Carolina delegation in Congress regarding the $200,000 financial drive for the "Greater Campbell College Movement."

Japanese, Chinese Girls Will Speak

Miss Haru Matsui, Japanese author and lecturer, and Miss Hsda Ya-Tsing Yen, daughter of F. C. Yen, former premier of China, will speak at a meeting in the Rialto Theater tonight at 8 o'clock. The meeting was arranged by the Washington branch of the American League for Peace and Democracy.

Miss Matsui, in a recent speaking tour through New England, declared the majority of the Japanese people were opposed to the war in China and pointed out that in several instances Japanese soldiers had mutinied.

Other speakers will be Donald Ogden Stewart and Representative John T. Bernard, of Minnesota. Edwin S. Smith, member of the National Labor Relations Board, will be chairman.

Denial of Moral Training Scored

The American people are not doing their duty toward the children and youth in the schools by denying them moral and religious training, the Rev. Francis A. Walsh, of Catholic University, said yesterday at the opening session of the two-day conference of the American Institution of Moral and Religious Training, in Calvary Baptist Church.

"I do not wish this meant as a reflection on the work the schools are now doing," he pointed out, "but to state that there is much more to be done. Why are we so afraid of bringing any moral or religious training into the schools? Are we afraid that our democracy will be ruined, or that some religious group will dominate us? The real danger lies in the fact that if we don't act, we may some day find the people who have religion under the thumbs of those who haven't religion."

Alley Project Loan May Hit Snag in House

Palmisano Will Oppose Any Conflict With Housing Group.

Also to Fight Any Plan Calling for Tax Exemptions.

Amendments to the Alley Dwelling Authority act, apparently on their way to smooth sailing in the Senate, may strike a snag in the House District Committee, Representative Vincent L. Palmisano (Democrat), Maryland, its chairman, indicated last night.

Palmisano told The Post he had not read the amendments, but that he would not favor increased purchase of Federally owned land in the District, exempt from District taxes. Otherwise, he indicated, he would likely help speed the amendments to adoption.

"If the program doesn't conflict with the Housing Authority," he said, "I'll go along, but it seems to me purchase of new land for low-rent housing is the function of the Housing Authority.

"Another thing. Any land purchased under these amendments shouldn't be exempt from District taxes and I'm not inclined to favor purchase of more land in the District which will not pay such taxes."

The amendments, drawn up at the direction of President Roosevelt and assured of the support of Senator William H. King (Democrat), Utah, chairman of the Senate District Committee, would release $10,000,000 to $15,000,000 of Housing Authority funds as a loan to the Alley Dwelling Authority. With these funds, the ADA could be expected to proceed by midsummer with work on at least two large housing projects.

The amendments also would authorize the Treasury to lend the ADA $1,000,000 for immediate furtherance of its present program of clearing out alley slums, and would permit the Authority to purchase land for low-rent dwellings in areas apart from the cleared alleys.

Church Leaders Back Drive on Cost of Living

Three Washington religious leaders yesterday indorsed the campaign, beginning Saturday to unite consumers in a drive on the city's high cost of living. The campaign will be held under the sponsorship of the Washington Consumers Conference.

With Mrs. Emily Newell Blair as chairman, a sponsoring committee of delegates from church, women's, civic, labor and fraternal organizations will meet Saturday at Wesley Hall to form a permanent federation of Washington consumers.

Indorsing the move yesterday were the Rev. John A. Ryan, professor of social ehtics, Catholic University; the Rev. Russell J. Clinchy, D. D., pastor of the Mount Pleasant Congregational Church, and Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld, of the Washington Hebrew Congregation.

"There are families in the Capital which cannot afford decent shelter, adequate medical care or milk for their children; other families which pay a disproportionate share of their incomes for those necessities," Mgr. Hjan said. "It is my belief that, as an organized group, co-operating with labor unions, Washington consumers will be enablet to act effectively toward righting those conditions."

Dr. Clinchy said labor and business organizations "should welcome the formation of a federation of consumers."

"It would be the function of the consumer's federation," he said, "to discover where and to what degree the cost of food, shelter and the other necessities of living in Washington do not warrant their prices and act toward establishing reasonable price levels."

Rabbi Gerstenfeld saw in the proposed federation an effort toward raising the standard of living in Washington.

Laws to Address Dinner of School

An address by Bolitha J. Laws, president of the District Bar Association, and a student debate will be included in the Woodward School's banquet at 7 p. m. Monday at 2400 Sixteenth street.

The debaters will argue the question, "Should the United States adopt the essential features of the British system of radio control and operation." Members of the Jefferson Literary Society will present the affirmative argument, while the negative will be taken by Washington Literary Society members.

Participating in a declamation contest following the debate will be Ransom Boltwood, Robert Fast, James Hayes, Jack Presley, Herzmark Safer, Waldo Starkweather and John Verkouteren.

Violent Death Shocks Writer On Movie Set

'Spawn of the North' Has Its Murders en Masse With Bloody Results.

By the United Press.

Hollywood, May 15.—The murder department of Paramount Studios, with Chief Executioner Dick Talmadge directing the blood spilling, geared up production today to one horrible death per hour—a record.

As associate director of the picture, "Spawn of the North," a story of the Alaskan salmon hijackers, Talmadge has bunched all the slaying scenes and is tackling them methodically on Paramount's private Pacific Ocean.

His actors ram harpoons through each other. They get ground to death between boats. They are crushed by icebergs. They have their skulls beaten in and their gizzards split by pirates. A few even get killed by bullets, but this kind of death is simple. Talmadge doesn't even give it his close attention.

We witnessed one of his finest murders, wherein a leering killer jumped from one boat to another, shoved a knife into his opponent's stomach, and then carved laterally. You never saw such an agonizing death, nor so much blood.

Censors May Object.

There's some doubt whether this particular scene will get by the censors and personally we hope it won't. It gave us a couple of bad moments, even though the corpse got up later, brushed the blood off himself and went to the cashier for his pay check.

Another murder also gave us the "Willies." One plug-ugly took a harpoon and sent it sailing from the deck of his fishing schooner into the back of his enemy, aboard the cruiser, Golden Hind.

The scene showed the victim nailed to the dockhouse with the harpoon. There was plenty of blood streaming from him. Even as he died, impaled to his own boat, another Alaskan gangster took a dive head first through the plate-glass window of the cabin. When he emerged, his face was cut and bleeding and he looked like a goner, too.

Cuts Disappeared.

He washed the blood off, the cuts disappeared in the process and he was as good as new. The man with the harpoon through him, though, had to have his picture retaken. So he strolled around, smoking a cigarette, and suffering no pain, though he had some little trouble keeping his harpoon from poking other actors, as he walked.

Talmadge, scion of a circus acrobat family, one time leading man, and now Paramount's expert on such trick photography, said would we please not tell you how he produced his blood, his gaping wounds, and his lingering deaths.

One thing, though, we can't resist telling you.

We grabbed a chunk of that smashed window and put it to our tongue and, would you believe it? It was rock candy!

Belasco

Nova Pilbeam, remembered as the youthful star of "Nine Days a Queen," returns to the screen at the Belasco Theater this week in "The Girl Was Young," a Gaumont British production originally released under the title of "Young and Innocent."

This is a murder mystery yarn that has been adroitly handled in the matters of suspense and climax. It also marks, I believe, the first modern romantic role in which Miss Pilbeam has been seen on this side. She has the advantage in this item of the services of two exceptionally capable leading men in Derrick de Marney and Percy Marmont.

Mr. De Marney is not too well known on the American screen, but in this assignment reveals all of the qualifications necessary to an immediate and, one dares to say, lasting popularity with the moviegoing public. Mr. Marmont will be remembered by all but the sheer juveniles in screen-gazing as the able actor who so long was a Hollywood favorite in the old days of the silent cinema. Mr. Marmont has not been in this country for many years, except on one brief visit as a temporary stop on a world cruise.

Miss Pilbeam, of course, may be taken for granted. She is one of the most competent young actresses appearing on either side of the Atlantic and makes that fact additionally clear in "The Girl Was Young." Miss Pilbeam is young. She also is immensely talented.

In the working out of the plot of "The Girl Is Young" there are those baffling revelations that make everyone in the cast a suspect in the murder case. The manner of the determination of the actual criminal—late in the picture, of course—is such as to give the tale a slightly new "twist."

Columbia

Tyrone Power, Don Ameche, Alice Brady and Alice Faye continue to dominate the early development of Chicago on the screen at Loew's Columbia Theater this week in the Twentieth Century-Fox production of "In Old Chicago."

Mr. Power, Mr. Ameche and Miss Brady are the mainsprings of the O'Leary family. They owned the cow that kicked over the lantern and started the horrendous conflagration that consumed an entire city—and thereby did it a favor, converting it from ramshackle wood to sturdy stone. All of this grandiose story of what a whale of a family the O'Leary's were, of course, is largely fictional. But it is interesting and entertaining and that fire provides a climax of dimensions that few pictures have been able to boast.

Alice Faye is cast in the role of a night club entertainer brought to the so-called Windy City to add a little zest to a wild town's gay life. She is not quite the type to fit the role, but she sings with her accustomed effectiveness and will prove satisfactory in the eyes of all who are able to reconcile a streamlined 1938 siren with the Middle West of the 1860's.

There are many others in the cast who lend this subject an expansive and far-flung appeal.

As chief auxiliary of the bill, the Columbia this week presents the fourth hair-raising installment of "The Lone Ranger," the chapter play that will go on for weeks and weeks. Additional short features and "News of the Day" complete the bill.

BELL.

"THE Adventures of Robin Hood," the Warner Brothers' magnificent Technicolor screen version of the famous Robin Hood legends, will have a gala Washington premiere at the Earle Theater on Thursday night of this week, May 19, it was announced yesterday by Zone Manager John J. Payette of the Warner interests in the Washington territory.

At this midnight preview showing, which will get under way at 11:30 p. m., regular night prices will be assessed. The house will be cleared after the final presentation of the current feature, "The Beloved Brat," starring Bonita Granville, and a new audience admitted for this added introductory performance. The regular run of the picture will begin Friday morning under the usual house policy of continuous performances and popular prices.

No stage show will be presented at the midnight inaugural. When the Friday engagement begins the Albertina Rasch Ballet will headline a pretentious vaudeville bill, devised by Harry Anger, director of stage presentations at the Earle.

Whether anything else is shown in conjunction with "The Adventures of Robin Hood" or not, the picture will prove itself to be worth the price of admission to any discriminating amusement seeker. We have tried a few times before to convey to the public some notion of the superlative excellence of this extraordinary subject. I can only repeat that it has everything—action, a ne plus ultra cast, fine story and a Technicolor treatment that has never been approached in beauty or technical perfection.

Not to see this new "Robin Hood"—Douglas Fairbanks, sr., did it with Enid Bennett back in 1922—will be to miss one of the most engrossing screen entertainments of the year.

Naturally, after 16 years, my recollection of the Fairbanks "Robin Hood" is not too vivid, but the suspicion lurks in the back of what is still incomprehensibly referred to as my mind that Erroll Flynn, Olivia De Havilland and their associate players "have something" on the earlier cast. Even if they didn't, the musical background and natural color photography would put the present rendition of the legendary tales out in front.

When Marion Weldon, Paramount starlet, designated by the airmen of Hollywood as their emissary to the celebration of Airmail Week in the National Capital, flew into Washington from Glendale, Calif., yesterday morning at 9:53, she brought the drama desks floral greetings from Adolph Zukor, Terry De Lapp and the members of the Paramount publicity staff. This was a gentle and a kindly gesture.

My box of carnation boutonnieres were as fresh as when they left the Cosmos Florist, at Beverly and Larchmont streets in Hollywood, being packed, as they were, in moist cotton and oiled paper. Incidentially, they were on my front porch with the morning papers, which seems to indicate a considerable amount of enterprise on somebody's part. I suspect C. N. Odell, from the New York office of Paramount, who usually engineers such things.

Tonight's performance of "The Far Off Hills," by the Abbey Theater Players, from Dublin, at the National Theater, will be sponsored by the Washington Newspaper Women's Club for their endowment of a bed at Children's Hospital for the benefit of underprivileged children who, otherwise, could not afford hospitalization.

Mrs. Roosevelt, wife of the President, an honorary member of the club, is one of the sponsors of this event and Mrs. Cordell Hull, wife of the Secretary of State, and Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, wife of the Secretary of the Navy, are serving as honorary chairman of patronesses and honorary chairman of the benefit, respectively.

The worthiness of this enterprise ought to be enough to pack the National tonight, even if the Abbey Theater Players' performance was not of such splendid merit as to pack it on its own account.

After tonight's performance at the National, the Newspaper Women's Club will play host to the Abbey Players in their headquarters in the Admiral, 1640 Rhode Island avenue, at which all of the distinguished Irish actors will be present to meet a notable list of guests. In response to Miss Katharine Brooks' invitation to be present, I can only say that with the review to write and a bit of makeup—newspaper, not facial—to see to, also immediately following the fall of the final curtain, she will have to keep her party going pretty late to make it possible for this desk to attend. Some parties of which I have heard do run pretty late, at that!

The usual "three days of grace" have been allowed for delinquent members of the subscription season of the Drama Guild and the American Theater Society of Washington to take up their options on their preferred seat locations for the season of 1938-'39. The books will be kept open through Wednesday of this week to enable those who have not already done so to renew their subscriptions. After Wednesday, new subscribers will be given their first choice of remaining seats in the various price scales.

Any new subscribers who think they would like to join the list of some 5,000 or 6,000 others will be mailed blanks for that purpose upon application to the office of the American Theater Society, in the National Theater.

Don't say I didn't tell you.

There should be some interest in the announcement from the Theater Guild that "Our Town," Pulitzer Prize play, already has been articled for a subscription tour under the auspices of the Guild of the American Theater Society that will include Washington, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and Chicago next season. The original New York cast, including Mrs. Craven, will continue in their present parts.

Frank Portillo, Washington's foremost wearer of the motley, yesterday evening tossed his annual party for his fellow-clowns appearing with the combined Ringling Brothers & Barnum and Bailey Circus, which opens a three-day engagement in town today.

In addition to the circus folk, there were present several of the Fourth Estate and a considerable number of other Washingtonians who are "circus minded," including Dr. Mann, of the National Zoological Park; George Vivian, director of the National Academy of Stage Training; Melvin Hildreth, the Capital City's walking encyclopedia of circus lore, and others.

Next Saturday, Mr. Portillo, for the third year, will be chief funmaker at the Children's Festival Circus, at Central High School Stadium. About 2,000 children appear in this colorful pageant. But it is Frank Portillo who is its mainspring.

• • • •

Week-end visitors to the Capital included that recent benedict, Leonard Bergman, executive trustee of the Erlanger estate, which controls the National Theater—either a guest or a next-door neighbor at the Hay-Adams House of Beau Brummel Eddie Plohn, manager of that temple of the living drama—Lew Lehr, of the Fox Movietone News, whose humor has gained international renown, along with his various dialects, Mrs. Lehr and their daughter, Gloria Anne, who were guests of Arthur and Helen De Titta at Wardman Park. Mr. De Titta is by way of being Fox Movietone News' head man in Washington, so that accounts for that.

Then, of course, there is Phil Regan, headlining this week at Loew's Capitol. Phil has Mrs. Regan and their two children with him on this trip and is handsomely ensconced at the Shoreham. I hated to miss that dinner engagement with them last night, but there is still balm in Gilead. We are going to make it Tuesday, instead.

You're-Not-Going-Anywhere-Anyway Note.

That highly polished airliner, anchored in front of the Commerce Building for Airmail Week, somehow doesn't look as big as it should. But I haven't been in it yet.

Trans-Lux

The news section of the bill at the Trans-Lux Theater this week runs the gamut of emotions, with thrill, history in the making, and plenty of sports included. There are interesting shots of the President returning from his Southern cruise while the United States Army Air Force from the South soars over New York City in battle formation. Some of the most beautiful pictures on the bill are those of a preview of what visitors to the New York World's Fair will expect in the way of night fireworks display.

In direct comparison are the shots unfolding the drama of the baby's eye operation in Chicago. Lew Lehr, as usual, rolls them in the aisles with his discourse on the Long Beach Beauty Contest. Sports are well covered, with the Kentucky Derby topping, followed by the annual girl jockeys' race at Pimlico, a local wrestling bout, a 5-year-old girl skater at Hollywood, the Pacific Coast yachting season getting under way, thrilling speedboat films, Louis and Schmeling signing for the forthcoming fight, not to mention a marble tournament in Tennessee.

International events are well covered with Hitler and Mussolini, King Victor Emmanuel leading the list. French Minister Daladier leaves for England while Czechoslovakia lets it be known that she will fight for her independence.

The short subjects are especially good. "In the Swim," including thrilling diving from the masts of a square-rigger by Olympic champions and a variety of swimming stunts, including underwater shots of Florida girls. There is also a beautiful color tour titled, "Crossroads of the Orient," and another short, "Going Places," with Lowell Thomas doing his stuff as commentator. The cartoon of the week is a clever one, "The Moth and the Flame," an RKO special.

John Takes a Lesson in Singing!

MUSIC DEPT.: Arnold Schoenberg, the famed composer, has been in California, where a number of studios have submitted offers to him . . . Schoenberg was invited to furnish the musical background for "The Good Earth" . . . It'll be a perfect opportunity for a man of your great talents," the composer was assured. "For instance, there's this one big scene which will afford tremendous scope in musical variations.' In this scene, the Chinese wife, who is very poor, goes out into the rice fields. The wind is howling, lightning and thunder strike, trees are uprooted, the rains descend. And there, in the field, the wife gives birth. What do you say about that? . . . "Well," the composer replied, "with so much happening—why do you need any music at all?"

EMPLOYMENT DEPT.: Leo McCarey, who won the Academy Award this year for his direction of "The Awful Truth," once worked for Sam Goldwyn, when he directed "The Kid From Spain." Ever since that time Goldwyn has tried unsuccessfully to secure McCarey's return . . . At Malibu Beach, the director met Goldwyn and outlined the plot of a movie story he just had written called "The Cowboy and the Lady" . . . "I'll buy it," Sam agreed and issued a check for $20,000 . . . Shortly thereafter the producer again met McCarey and said: "I got a surprise for you. I want you to direct a picture for me. And you know what the story is? Your own story, 'The Cowboy and the Lady'" . . . McCarey shook his head. "Oh, no," he replied. "Not that damn thing."

THEATER DEPT.: Marc Connelly now is rehearsing his forthcoming production of "Two Bouquets." As is customary, during rehearsals, before the scenery is completed and delivered, chalked lines on the stage designate the spots where the scenery eventually will be placed . . . Richard Hummett, 10-year-old son of Connelly's manager, marked these lines in crayon and then asked: "What will I get for this?" . . . Mr. Connelly, mindful of reward as well as of union difficulties, replied: "I'll give you program credit" . . . And so, at the Windsor Theater on May 31, when "Two Bouquets" is presented, the program credits will include "Crayonist—Richard Hummett."

The scouts met and the Fascist trooper asked: "Is this the road to Guadalajara?" . . . "I've just come from there," the loyalist informed. "But what I'm trying to find out is—is this the road to Brihuega?" . . . They stared at each other—until comprehension came—each turned around and sped back to camp.

POLITICS: The newspapers yesterday announced that Elliott Roosevelt, at the Kentucky Derby, challenged a stranger who had made slurring reference to the President . . . Elliott, as a matter of fact, would look with disfavor upon a third term for Roosevelt . . . "Speaking as a son, that is," he told a group of us recently. "That job takes too much out of a man. Little

"Ruggle of Red Gap," that hardy old comedy adapted from the original stories by Harry Leon Wilson with incomparable skill by Walter DeLeon and Harlan Thompson, was revived yesterday at the Little Theater as the major feature of a screen bill that also includes "China Strike Back," a "scoop" booking that probably will arouse more timely and vital interest than "Ruggles."

However, Charles Laughton, in the role of the "gentleman's gentleman," who was "sold down the river" to a group of rich, but wild and woolly Americans in a poker game; Mary Boland, Charles Ruggles, ZaSu Pitts—and what has become of her, by the way?—Roland Young, Leila Hyams—and her, too?—Maude Eburne, Lucien Littlefield, James Burke and Dell Henderson lend the Harry Leon Wilson work such a high quality of humor that "Ruggles" still, despite its many reappearances on local screens, must be looked upon as the Little's foremost attraction for the current week.

This is the picture in which Charles Laughton, as an incongruous interpolation in a picture primarily dedicated to fun, gives a remarkably true and effective reading of Lincoln's Gettysburg Address. Throughout the picture, he plays with a restraint that adds to the comedy inherent in his role. The others in the cast, of course, are past masters in the art of farcical tomfoolery. There is an abundance of it in this subject, and it all is superlatively well done.

"China Strikes Back" runs almost three full reels in length, and is an interesting and exciting commentary upon an unbelievable situation in the Far East.

There are other short-reel subjects and newsreel to complete one of the Little's most attractive bills.

AMUSEMENTS

HEDDA HOPPER.

Hollywood, Calif., May 15.—With Hollywood carrying its wailing wall with it, an extra tin cup to catch the falling tears, it was quite a treat to take a whirl around the 20th Century-Fox lot and see nothing but happy faces—not even a thin man.

Went first to the "I'll Give A Million" set. I was welcomed by that fine actor, Frank Reicher, who had just heard a good one from a newcomer. Everything had been going like clockwork, when suddenly there was a delay of half an hour. This film novice looked around and said, "Until now I didn't know we were in the picture business."

Warner Baxter, fresh from his fishing trip—he'd caught six yellow tails—extolled the virtues of his new boat. I asked how Winifred enjoyed the trip. "Isn't it funny," he said, "none of our wives enjoy our boats. They either stay home or take a big one."

"Noll, who'd never flown before, went 7,000 miles—changed planes 11 times—chasing Errol Flynn, trying to get him to promise he'd return to Hollywood at once. When all the time he knew if Errol received an invitation from a maharajah, or an interesting tramp, that Errol will go off to the other end of the world. And here am I sticking around Hollywood worrying as to whether my last picture will be a success."

Nats Beaten by Red Sox, 4-3; Drop to Fourth Place

Sports | The Washington Post | Sports

*X WASHINGTON: MONDAY, MAY 16, 1938 15

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Boston, May 15.—This is no time to wax enthusiastic over the Washington ball club. The Nats have just taken three on the chin from the Red Sox and dropped from the league lead to fourth. In fact, they have lost four of their last five games and their pitching is at the lowest ebb of the season. There are definite signs that the Nats aren't a good road club—they've lost six out of eight away from Griffith Stadium—and tonight they embark on their first Western invasion.

POVICH

That's painting a pretty dreary picture for Bucky Harris' team, we guess, but we doubt that it's as dismal as that. In fact, there are signs that Washington may yet have a powerful voice in the distribution of the 1938 honors. Honest, there are. Listen:

Those three straight lickings suffered here at the hands of the Red Sox are hardly an index to the true strength of the Nats. Up here in Boston, they were meeting the hottest club in the league—a team that is unbeaten in its last eight starts. A team on that kind of a winning streak is both an inspired and a lucky ball club. When the Nats were running their own winning streak to seven straight last week they were the same kind of club that the Red Sox are at this writing—they were playing good ball and getting the most of the good breaks. It runs that way in baseball.

In fact, the Nats and Red Sox are much the same kind of ball clubs—sharp fielding, strong on the hitting side, and with doubtful pitching. Anything the Nats accomplish this season they will achieve with their defensive play and their slugging and, perhaps, despite their pitching.

But the failure of George Case and Taft Wright—Bucky Harris' rookie outfielders—may have been a blessing in disguise. Because it brought Al Simmons back into the line-up, and the Harris outfield now appears to be squared away. During the past two days, Simmons has been hitting as of yore when he was plain murder at the plate. If he has finally struck his stride, the Nats leave Boston a better ball club than when they came here.

And there is evidence, too, that the Nats' supposed weakness against lefthanded pitching is something of a myth, particularly with Simmons in the line-up. Fritz Ostermueller, the southpaw who shut out Washington two weeks ago, was driven from the box in the fifth inning yesterday and today Lefty Grove, the league's No. 1 southpaw, was reached for 13 hits. The Nats pried him loose from only three runs, 'tis true, but all day long the Boston outfielders were hauling down vicious line drives.

With Simmons batting third and Zeke Bonura fourth, any club that sends a southpaw against the Nats is pitching to the strength of Bucky Harris' crew. Cecil Travis has never been bothered by southpaw pitching and Buddy Lewis has always been a bit partial to it. The managers who save their southpaws for the Nats may run into a heap of grief.

That's the brighter side of the picture. When Bucky Harris contemplates his pitching he engages in no mental handsprings of delight. The Washington staff has all the earmarks of being a very ordinary group of pitchers, indeed. Wes Ferrell has been sadly ineffective in all but two of his six starts. Weaver has not justified the promise he showed in the South, DeShong has lasted the nine-inning route only once, Elon Hogsett has failed to finish his last two games, Harry Kelley has been dismally bad, and the other day Dutch Leonard had a horrible time of it trying to get the batters out.

Harris' only hope that his pitching will take a turn for the better lies in the direction of Clark Griffith. The Old Fox fancies his 1938 ball club and none knows better than he that the pitchers are dragging his team down. One of these fine days, if not sooner, Griffith is expected to engineer a deal that will bring the Nats at least one new pitcher. Whenever he likes his ball team, the Old Fox spares little expense.

* * * *

An upturn in the Nats fortunes is expected when the club starts its tour of the West. For the first time in the last dozen years, the league's strength is not in the West. Chicago, Detroit have been soft pickings this season for the Eastern clubs and the Browns, again, are in the league cellar. Only at Cleveland does trouble loom for the Nats.

It will be at Cleveland that Harris, who is impatient to learn how much he can expect of his 1937 sensation, Ken Chase, will give that southpaw rookie his first start. Chase could lift a terrific load from Harris' shoulders if he proves no flash in the pan. Harris has not yet given up on the lad who beat the Yankees twice last summer in two starts.

Pick 'Em Up There, Joe!

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Roberts Wins Albany-New York Race; Fred Jacoby Is Second

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 15.—Ted Roberts, 41-year-old New York boathouse proprietor, won the eleventh annual Albany-to-New York outboard marathon today when he piloted his little boat Phantom down 130 miles of choppy water ahead of 16 other contestants.

Fred Jacoby, jr., of North Bergen, N. J., who won in 1935, finished second and was cheated of another victory when his craft broke down about a quarter-mile from the line when he was far in lead. He barely limped across ahead of Douglass Fonda, of New York City, who was third.

The weather was the worst in the history of the event, and it was reflected in the times. Roberts, completing the stretch in 3:55.45, averaged only 33.023 miles an hour as compared to the record of 44.4 established by Charles Cabot, of New Haven, Conn., in 1932.

The start was delayed more than two hours, and it was only after repeated ballots among the drivers that it finally was decided to take off in the face of an official suggestion to postpone the event.

Boats swamped right and left all the way down the stretch, and all the drivers took a walloping, even when they stayed close inshore. Roberts, the oldest man ever to win the race, was so tired at the finish he barely could pull into the float.

"I had to bail all the way," he said, "and I almost decided to quit a couple of times. It was awful."

For Roberts it was the ninth attempt, and then he won only because of a generous handicap. Jacoby, despite his tough luck when in sight of the finish, actually covered the course in 3:30.36 and averaged 36.966 miles an hour. Fonda, third, was timed in 3:39.09 at an average of 35.524 miles an hour. That's how it goes in outboard racing.

Other finishers: Fourth, Charles Keogh, Saranac Lake, N. Y.; fifth, Kenneth Mackenzie, New Haven, Conn.; sixth, Worth Rogeeman, Fort Worth, Tex.; seventh, Marshall Eldridge, East Weymouth, Mass.; eighth, Lotsey Toth, Paterson, N. J.; ninth, Gilbert Petermann, New York; tenth, Harry Birdsall, Ardsley, N. Y.; eleventh, Emil Mazer, College Point, N. Y.; twelfth, Jimmy Altman, New Kensington, Pa.

The winner, Roberts, completed the 130-mile grind in 3:55.45, at an average speed of 33.023 miles an hour. Jacoby, the second man, finished in 3:30.36, at an average of 36.966 m. p. h., but was in a higher-powered boat and conceded Roberts a long handicap at the start. Marshall Eldredge averaged 41.7 miles an hour in winning a year ago.

'Upsets' Mark Sailing Race; So Big Wins

The fourth race of the Potomac River Sailing Association ended in a dry squall on the second lap after 34 boats started. Fifteen boats finished, the 20-footers and Comets crossing the line shortly before the wind sent the rest of the fleet scurrying for cover under jib and reefed mains'l.

Barely two minutes after the start Sassy Two, sailed by D. Verner Smythe, suffered an accident when the mast snapped in two at the lower spreaders. Sassy Two, leading at this point, dropped out of the race. So Big, skippered by Clyde Cruit, came in first in the Comet class, with Ernest Covert's Escapade second. Nandua, a winner this year, left the race when her skipper, Charles Dodge, had a turnbuckle break. Barbara Meyers, finishing in sixth place, crossed the line after Minx broke her rudder and was forced to lower sail.

Cricket II, skillfully sailed by H. Clinton Bush, made the best time of the day, 42:51, and the fastest time ever turned in on the 4¼-mile course. Judge Prentice Edrington's Lady Avon was second, with Myray, sailed by Ralph Youngs less than two minutes behind.

W. W. Valentine's Eleanor was the only snipe to finish, the rest of the class dropping out when the terrific shift in wind came.

A number of boats capsized at the finish of the race; among them Humfeld's Spray, a new boat this sailed by Dr. A. Gould and his daughter, which was driven on the rocks off Naval Air Station and badly damaged. Gaillard's dinghey Lucky Duck also capsized.

Six Pitchers Routed in Battle of Hits; Pepper Martin Stars.

St. Louis, May 15 (AP).—After holding a commanding seven-run lead in the fourth, the Cardinals had to resort to the pinch hitting of Pepper Martin to beat the Cincinnati Reds, 12 to 11, in the tenth inning for the second straight day.

The Reds pounded the 11-4 lead into an 11-11 deadlock in the eighth then missed a chance to win in the ninth when Harry Craft was caught trying to score after Don Gutteridge dropped the ball. Mickey Owen tripled and Pepper Martin broke up the battle with a pinch single.

The Cards collected 17 hits off five Cincinnati pitchers. Ducky Medwick hit four for five to boost his average to .426. Curt Davis, who went in with one out in the ninth, was credited with the win. Ray Benge was charged with the loss.

Browns Trip Tigers, 4 to 1

Oral Hildebrand Gives Only Two Hits.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, May 15.—The St. Louis Browns whipped Detroit's Tigers, 4 to 1, today in the final game of their series, which lasted only five full innings because of rain.

Oral Hildebrand, the Brownie hurler, gave the Tigers only two hits in the five official innings. Detroit got to him for two more blows and a run in the sixth, but because the game was called in that frame they didn't go in the records.

Dodgers Bow To Bees, 10-7

Mungo Routed; Five Hit Circuit Clouts.

By the Associated Press.

Brooklyn, May 15.—The Boston Bees, sporting more of a home-run punch than they have displayed all year, belted the Dodgers, 10 to 7, today and climbed out of seventh place after a one-day stop in that lowly spot.

Gene Moore, Ray Mueller and Tony Cuccinello walloped four-baggers in the battle of home runs. Dolph Camilli and Babe Phelps turned the trick for the Brooklyns as both starting pitchers, Van Mungo for Brooklyn and Lou Fette for the Bees, were driven to the showers.

A three-run rally in the eighth, after the Dodgers had come from behind to deadlock the count, put the game on ice for the Bees.

Pirates Nose Cubs, 4 to 3

Dickshot's Single Wins Game in 11th.

Chicago, May 15 (AP).—The Pittsburgh Pirates won their second successive extra inning battle with the Chicago Cubs today, 4 to 3, in 11 innings, although the Cubs pounded three Pirate pitchers for 13 hits and received eight bases on balls.

Victory gave the Bucs a sweep of the two-game series and enabled them to displace Chicago in the National League runner-up spot.

John Dickshot's single with Arky Vaughan on second base in the eleventh gave Pittsburgh its winning run after Johnny Rizzo had tied the score with a home run in the sixth.

The Cubs almost won the game in their half of the ninth, but a brilliant throw by Lloyd Waner to Catcher Al Todd caught Pinch Runner Clay Bryant at the plate as he tried to score from second on Stanley Hack's single to center with two out.

Nats Head West To Meet Tigers; DeShong to Pitch

Boston, May 15.—A grim gang of Nats tonight headed for Detroit and their first invasion of the West. They were in a mean mood following three successive defeats here by the Red Sox and their loss of the league lead.

Tomorrow, at Detroit, Jimmy DeShong will make his third start of the season. His last effort was a winning one against the Tigers in Griffith Stadium. In that game, DeShong pitched one-hit ball for six innings, but retired under pressure in the eighth.

Grove Wins Sixth; Zeke Hits Homer

Lefty Gives 13 Hits, But Tightens Up in Pinches; Weaver Beaten.

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

Fenway Park, Boston, May 15.—The skidding Nats, who have been losing altitude in the American League pennant race ever since they reached Boston, crashed today—into fourth place.

They were forced down by the capable pitching of lean Lefty Grove, who weathered a barrage of 13 Washington hits and outlasted Monte Weaver in a 4-3 duel. Nimbly hurdling threat after threat, Grove pitched the league-leading Red Sox to their eighth straight triumph and extended his own private winning streak to six in a row.

It was a bitter dose for the Nats—this

Walter Haight

"Cy" Martin, of the Calvert street Martins, comes through with a suggestion that is of interest to all turf-goers.

This is what he has to say:

"On a recent Pimlico program of 62 entries, 53 carried different color combinations. Stable colors, in their various combinations, run into the hundreds, and because of the fact that there are only so many colors in the rainbow, there is often much confusion when it comes to following colors around the track. The expression, "I got my colors mixed," is a race-track classic. The practice of losing colors in a race is not reserved for occasionals alone. Regulars and officials find it a nightmare. A few seasons ago in Florida, because of a mistake in colors, officials placed a horse which actually finished fifth into the winner's circle. For some time after they took a nice ribbing from the press.

HAIGHT

"To obviate the confuison which results in certain races where there is not one distinctive color, and in practically all races where there are several somewhat similar color combinations, I suggest that distinctive colors be assigned to post positions. Beginning with the national colors, the arrangements could be:

1. Red.
2. White.
3. Blue.
4. Orange.
5. Black.
6. Yellow.
7. Brown.
8. Green.
9. White, with 4 or 5 inch red polka dots.
10. White, with blue polka dots.
11. White, with green polka dots.
12. Yellow, with brown polka dots.

"Similar distinctive colors could could be selected to take care of additional starters. Collars, cuffs, sleeves and caps should be of the same color, so that when one saw red that's all there would be to it.

"Such a system of colors would result in greater enjoyment of the race. Colors and post positions would be synonymous. The only conceivable objection to such a scheme would come from owners, but to the fans, who are the real supporters of racing, its adoption would be a blessing and good riddance to confusion. I would deeply appreciate your passing the suggestion around, as I believe it would be a distinct benefit to the racing public, as well as to officials and sports writers, and feel that they would support it to a man."

Brother Martin's permanent-color system is now being used by all dog tracks. It is a blessing to the customers, too. Despite the darting and speeding of the greyhounds, most dog fans follow the field very well. If the dog colors were those of the owner, with many of the blends conflicting, I believe it would take away the thrills, for if a person cannot follow "his" dog, then the sport whittles down to seeing a pack of dogs run and then looking to the results board to find the winner.

As Brother Martin says, the horse owners would object. There's a lot of tradition behi i some colors and horse people would be reluctant to give them up. But I'm with Brother Martin 100 per cent and I believe something along this line will be accomplished in the future when racing either names or has forced upon it a "Judge Landis" or a "Will Hays."

MORNING LINES.

The post time for the first race Preakness Day was shifted from 2 o'clock to 2:15 . . . one of the press-box wits remarked, "Mayor Jackson hasn't shown up to throw out the first horse" . . . Gregg Johnson, former turfwriter for the Baltimore News, has been made a placing judge at Charles Town. . . . betting at Pimlico Preakness day was 50 per cent off last year. . . . in round numbers, $700,000 was bet last Saturday . . . one of the Baltimore paper's early editions had a head-line which read, "Fans Storm Pimlico" . . . the bass drummer did not remove the cover from his drum as the band paraded in the rain and somebody yelled, "Look, the drum's wearing tights" . . . it was "Mudder's Day" and nobody was wearing a white carnation . . . I guess I've gone too far.

Eight-Race Card Topped By Inaugural

By Walter Haight.

Up near Harpers Ferry, in that Panhandle section of West Virginia border by the Shenandoah and Potomac Rivers, horse racing digs in today for a 36-program stand at Charles Town. Although there had been racing at Charles Town since the 1700's, it was considered folly when building was first begun on a small, but modern turf plant on the site.

However, Charles Town has become a popular haven for turf followers of Washington and nearby States and the oval has proved a profitable one. Lacking a little in the class of horses that perform on the major tracks, Charles Town provides the same thrills and chills and the money transacted is of the same brand that buys clothes and groceries.

The West Virginia track has shown an excellent percentage of winning favorites and a check-up shows that the public choices have been batting about .333 since racing first began at that point in 1933.

Almost everything that could happen at a race track is down on the record books at Charles Town, including a winner on which not a single ticket was purchased. Time was when Charles Town was "poison" in racing circles. Tales of doped and painted horses drifted across the mountains. But strong officiating staged a clean-up and the track is back in the good graces of horsemen and fans.

Officials have not spared their feelings in putting Charles Town on the right track. They have been quick to broadcast indiscretions on the part of horsemen and jockeys. The riders, who drew ten suspensions in five days for a record a couple of years ago, have been forced to toe the mark since.

Charles Town has allowed horsemen to share in its prosperity. Starting with "half-mile" purses, the rewards have increased and this meeting will see an average of $3,300 distributed to the money horses each day with a total of $118,000 available during the meeting.

President-General Manager Al Boyle reported on the phone last night that everything was in readiness for the session. Plenty of horses and riders and the official family is groomed to keep the show moving.

An eight-race program is scheduled for today, featured by the Inaugural Purse, a test of 4½ furlongs, which drew 14 overnight entries. For better racing, Charles Town fields are limited to eight starters.

James A., winner at Havre de Grace, is assured a position at the barrier and probably will be installed the favorite. He will be up against plenty of speed, however, from Prince Turley, Poll Parrot, Timber Lady and others.

Post time for the first race is 2:15 p. m. with the daily double on the second and third races.

Man of the Month

(Each day, Arch McDonald distributes 10 points among the Nats whose play was most helpful to the Washington Club. At the end of each month The Washington Post will award to the leading player a gift in token of the honor of being The Post-Wheaties' "Man of the Month.")

By Arch McDonald.
(WJSV-Wheaties Baseball Commentator.)

Five Nats share in the award of points in the Man of the Month Club today despite the Nats' defeat at Boston.

To Zeke Bonura, five points, because his terrific home run with a man on base was the greatest single contribution of a Washington player and because it accounted for exactly half of the Washington runs.

To Buddy Lewis, two points, because he hit the ball hard all day, made three singles, scored two runs and played a smashing game in the field.

To Al Simmons, one point, because his single in the seventh led to the tying run in that inning and because he limited five hits into left field to singles.

To Mel Almada, one point, because despite his hitlessness, he made two sensational catches against the centerfield fence on successively hit balls in the third inning.

To Monte Weaver, one point, because he gave Lefty Grove a valiant pitching battle and limited the hard-socking Red Sox to eight hits.

THE SCORE.

Dauber's Preakness Victory Makes 3-Year-Old Title a 3-Horse Scramble

By the Associated Press.

Just a year ago War Admiral already had blazed most of his trail to that title with triumphs in the Kentucky Derby and the Preakness. The Samuel Riddle colt's victory in the 1937 Belmont Stakes won that crown for him.

Now it appears that a three-way duel between Dauber, Lawrin, the Derby winner, and Stagehand, wonder colt of the West Coast, will be needed to stamp the name on this year's title.

Richard Handlen, Washington trainer for William C. duPont, jr., said today Dauber will point for the mile and a half Belmont Stakes June 4. He will leave for the New York track tomorrow morning.

Dauber's great drive through Pimlico's mud after his normal slow start proved his trainer's liking for longer distances for the duPont colt. With that in view, Handlen said Dauber will not go in the Withers Mile at Belmont Saturday.

The son of Pennant, given a perfect ride by Jockey "Moose" Peters, was six and a half lengths off the pace at the half-mile post yesterday, but moved up fast on the outside to prove again what he showed in the Derby—that he is one of the year's greatest stretch runners.

He covered the mud-laden mile and three-sixteenths distance in the impressive time of 1:59 4-5, three seconds over the track record set last Wednesday by Pompoon over a fast course.

The great performance labels him as the "horse to beat" in the Belmont. His showing there, Handlin said, will determine whether the chestnut colt is to run in the Arlington classic at Arlington Park, Chicago, in July.

The classic also is scheduled to draw Maxwell Howard's Stagehand and H. M. Woolf's Lawrin.

Stagehand and Dauber are old opponents of the turf. Dauber ran third to Stagehand and Can't Wait in the Santa Anita Handicap, Grade A mile race, and second to Stagehand in the Derby there at a mile and an eighth a week later.

The Lawrin-Dauber clash in the Kentucky Derby left much to be settled in a future meeting. Jockey Peters contended after that race Dauber was bumped.

Stagehand was kept from the Derby and the Preakness by coughing.

The surprise of the Preakness' forty-eighth running came from Cravat, Townsend G. Martin's 67-1 shot. He came from nowhere to follow Dauber across the finish line, with Hal Price Headley's Menow third.

Bronson Picks Ross to Kayo Armstrong; Praises His Skill

By the Associated Press.

Grossinger Lake, N. Y., May 15. Barney Ross, working hard for the defense of his welterweight title, was cheered today when Bow-tie Jimmy Bronson flatly predicted he would knock out Challenger Henry Armstrong when they meet in Madison Square Garden Bowl, May 26.

Bronson, one of boxing's shrewdest judges of condition, visited camp. After watching Barney step through six fast rounds with three sparring partners he went right out to the end of the limb for the champion.

"He's the smartest fighter in the world today, white or colored," said Bronson. "Unquestionably he's the sharpest hitter in his division and proves his smartness in his anticipation of the other fellow's moves. And he is tops in putting his opponent in a disadvantageous position.

"The smartest fighter we have had in the last 30 years was Gene Tunney and when he moved out of boxing to take his place in business, Ross succeeded him.

"I'll say for the record that Ross will knock Armstrong out and that he'll do it with his right uppercut. Barney looks better to me than he did five or six years ago. He has added knowledge and poise.

"He's more of a champion today than ever before," concluded Bronson.

Ross' sparring mates today were the same as yesterday—Pete Galiano, Augie Gonsales and Pete Cara. They did their best but Ross handled them about as he pleased.

Manager Sam Pian plans to have Ross end hard training next Sunday. Tuesday of next week the welterweight champion will break camp and move into New York. He'll limber up in a gymnasium there Wednesday preparatory to weighing in for Armstrong at noon on Thursday.

Brown, Bruns Agree to Bout

Will Rassle in Feature at Arena on Friday.

Orville Brown, of Kansas, and Bobby Bruns, of Chicago, have patched up difficulties, and agreed to meet for the third straight week in the feature wrestling match on Joe Turner's card next Friday (not Thursday) at Turner's Arena.

The way to the match was paved yesterday when Brown and Bruns, two huskies with plenty of dynamite, agreed to let Promoter Turner be the mediator of the financial end of the match.

Brown said he would wrestle only if the winner got 75 per cent of the purse, and Bruns insisted on a winner-take-all basis.

That a real "grudge" battle has developed is evidenced by the stubborn manner in which the two fighters have acted with respect to a third match.

They grappled to a draw in their first meeting, and last Thursday, after a head-on collision, and with both grapplers completely out on their feet, Brown happened to fall on Bruns, and was awarded the decision.

Whirlwinds Swamp Cumberland A. C., 13-3

Cumberland, Md., May 15.—Continuing to play the brand of ball that gave them the championship last season, Trozzo's Whirlwinds went into a half-game lead in the City Softball League by whipping the Cumberland Boy's Club 13-3.

It was the fifth straight victory for the Whirlwinds, which only lost its opening game. Home runs by Roy Walburn and Edgar Widdows featured a first-inning spree in which the victors scored five runs.

Time Out! BY CHET SMITH

At The Post . . . .

With Bill Bennings.

Dear Al: Selections at Charles Town.

Well, we're going to let the Lawrins, the Daubers and the Fighting Foxes take a rest and we're going to concentrate on old "Charlesburg" in an attempt to get the Benningites out of the red. Whenever I think of Charles Town, I think of a conversation with a hotel clerk last winter in Jacksonville, Fla. He heard my name and said, "I would like to ask you a question." I thought sure he was going to ask if I wasn't the fellow who flew to California, who covered the Kentucky Derby, or who always writes about Aneroid. He crossed me up by asking, "Are you the guy who picks those winners at Charles Town?" I guess he must have read the column on one of my good days. Well, it looks like Dauber is the tops. He certainly turned on plenty of heat in that mud at Pimlico. The way he handled Menow and the others makes him appear headed for everything the Nation has to offer for 3-year-olds. Trainer Dick Handlin really can take the bows. I remember the auction at Pimlico and many horsemen believed that the duPont forces had bid too high on the son of Pennant. Just a big money stable trying to get a horse for breeding purposes, was the general opinion. But second in the Kentucky Derby and winner in the Preakness is a pretty fair record. I'm glad to see Willie duPont get the honors. Racing needs the support of money men and, after this spring's happenings, I'll wager you couldn't pry Mr. duPont loose from the sport.

BILL.

First race—Beedmore, second on the also eligible list, would be dangerous if allowed to get into action in this field. Ran well over the Bowie track and I'm going to string along. Jungo appears best of those assured a place at the post. Happy Chase to take care of the others.

Second race—Veritas has been working well and always was partial to this course. Gets in with only steadying weight and should take down the main money. Packaway should be prominent. Portam would like an off track and probably will get it.

Third race—Lulu Khayyam has plenty of speed and is favored by the short route. Needs only to break with her field to have an excellent chance. Scold has oodles of early foot and may have to be reckoned with. Mary Allen to show.

Fourth race—Jadaan packs a lot of weight but certainly is the class of this group. A little energetic saddle work is all needed. Night Watch, among the reserves, would be prominent if sent postward. Disown has speed and may surprise.

Sixth race—Early Broom has the foot of this party and may steal the lead and stick it out. Jobakheta ran a dull race after flashing plenty of speed over at Pimlico. Bungalow's last was a big improvement.

Seventh race—Best Policy appears to be the best of the day. Likes the route. Shot Up and Penway to take care of the others.

Eighth race—Queen Elizabeth closed gamely in that recent Pimlico outing and I'm going to back her. Easter Herald has been prepped on this track and is dangerous. James Boy is a doubtful starter, but in top shape.

Ninth race (substitute)—If this race is used, I'll take Book Reader, Pacemaker and Heart Play.

Two Capital Club Duos Win Handily

Capt. Rodgers, Mrs. Ransom Win at Army and Navy; Washington Play to Miss Foxwell, Frank Williams; Berquist Is Winner.

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Indian Spring and Capital Golf clubs each sent two teams into the quarter-final round of the Maryland State Golf Association four-ball championships yesterday at Manor, with the victories scored by the former club's teams featuring the day's play. Washington teams were victorious in inter-city competition with the Baltimore duos by a 4-to-1 margin, and sent six teams into the round of eight compared with two for the visitors.

Beaver Dam, Columbia, Hillendale and Elkridge will be represented by one team each in the quarter-final round next Sunday at Hillendale.

Buddy Sharkey and Arthur Urban, playing as the Indian Spring number one team, scored the major upset by trouncing Rolling Road's strong duo, Spencer Overton and E. G. Barnes, by a 3 and 2 margin. After the teams halved the first 11 holes, Sharkey won the twelfth with a par and he and his partner closed the match on the sixteenth green with the Gonzaga High ace needing par for a 69.

Spicer and Sasscer team perfectly in scoring the second win of the day for the Springers, upseting the host club aces, Harry Pitt and Tommy Bones, on the eighteenth hole. The winners hit a birdie streak from the seventh to eleventh holes, inclusive, to take a one up lead, increased it to two at the fifteenth and although losing the next halved the final two holes to protect their lead.

Jones-Parr Lose.

Billy Houghton and George Malloy defeated the Baltimore C. C. stars, Harris Jones and Harry Parr 3d, by a 3 and 2 margin and as a result of the victory must be highly regarded in the title play. The other Capital Club team, Frank White and Bill Pendergast, scored a surprising victory in eliminating the second host club duo, Max Taylor and Ralph Gibson on the final green.

B. Warren Corkran, veteran Elkridge player, and his partner J. D. Potts, won the day's marathon battle over Hillendale's Bobby Jones and Wallie Haile, on the twentieth hole, after being three down and five to play. Corkran birdied the twentieth hole for the triumph.

Columbia's No. 1 team, Page Cornwell and P. Frizzell, subbing for Maury Nee and Harvey Johnson, won easily over the Sparrows Point combination of Jack Reid and John Morris, 5 and 3, while the Columbia No. 2 team of Lord and Buckingham was losing to Ernie Caldwell and Gene Bruning of Hillendale, 5 and 4. The other match found Martin McCarthy and John R. Miller of Beaver Dam scoring over Dave Crook and W. R. Burns, of Rolling Road, 3 and 2, after holding a 1 up margin at the turn.

Capital No. 2, Billy Houghton and George Malloy, defeated Baltimore Country Club No. 2, Harris Jones and Harry Parr 3d, 3 and 2.

Elkridge No. 1, B. Warren Corkran and J. D. Potts, defeated Hillendale No. 2, Bobby Jones and Wally Haile, 1 up, 20 holes.

ARMY AND NAVY.

Capt. R. J. Rodgers and Mrs. P. L. Ransom won the mixed scotch foursome event at Army and Navy with a net 69, from 42-42, 84-15. Mrs. G. F. Hussey and Commander E. J. Patton were next, scoring a gross of 79, 38-41, and deducting a nine handicap for a net 70. Three tied for third with Mrs. Ludewig and Lieut. M. A. Sawyer, who scored 86-15, 71, winning in the draw.

Commander P. B. Nidecker, of the Service Club, scored his second hole-in-one in five months, this time on the eighteenth hole. He used a spoon on the 196-yard number.

G. B. H. Hall was the blind bogey winner with a net 82, while a quartet tied for second at 84, including I. C. Bogart, D. H. Pratt, C. A. Lockwood and E. L. Cummings.

WASHINGTON.

Miss B. Foxwtll and Frank M. Williams won the mixed Scotch foursome event at Washington, from a field of 19 twosomes. The winners scored 93-19, 74.

Capt. and Mrs. T. Niles were second with 103-26, 77, while third place went to Mrs. Don Johnson and T. Parkinson, with 101-23, 78.

CONGRESSIONAL.

J. N. Strait was second with 80-10, 70, with H. L. Anderson next, 83-12, 71, and J. N. Gilmore, 86-14, 72.

CAPITAL.

W. C. Whittle won the match play against par event at Capital Club, finishing two up on perfect figures. The winner's score was six holes better than the trio that tied for second four down to par, Ken Spencer, Macy McDonald and George Borsari.

BEAVER DAM.

A. H. Thompson and Albert Haas are deadlocked with net 72's at the halfway mark of the Beaver Dam senior's tournament, with N. C. Turnage a stroke back. The low medal handicap event will be concluded next week with another 18-hole round.

Thompson scored 87-15—72; Haas, 101-29—72, and Turnage, 95-22—73.

INDIAN SPRING.

Three tied with net 70's in the Selective Handicap Tourney at Indian Spring, D. H. McNeal, 95-25—70; R. W. Westwood, 83-13—70, and J. M. Cooper, 95-25—70.

KENWOOD.

Seventy-four was the lucky number in the Kenwood Blind Bogey event yesterday and eight tied at that figure, including F. H. McCrary, 90-16—74; J. C. Foulis, 89-15—74; R. V. Herman, 87-13—74; E. P. Ross, 93-19—74; A. H. Tew, 99-25—74; H. T. Snyder, 94-20—74; F. B. Buckingham, 93-19—74, and H. S. Bain, 90-16—74.

EAST POTOMAC.

Bill Waggaman, member of Roosevelt High's Dawes Cup championship team, finally defeated A. Noel on the eighth extra hole the twenty-sixth of their second round encounter in the fifth flight of the East Potomac Spring Tournament yesterday.

Other second round matches found Julian Williams winning over Paul Purlia in the second flight, 1 up, and Art Myers defeating Calvin Loving in the same bracket by a like margin. Henry Peel defeated T. J. White, 3 and 2, in a second round match in the eighth flight.

2 Postponed.

The Duffer's Tournament at Manor was postponed because of the inclement weather over the week-end, while the Argyle members were allowed another week to finish qualifying for the club ladder.

Woodmont.

Gene Larkin will play host to the Middle Atlantic P. G. A. members in a pro-amateur event at Woodmont today, with the Woodmont club supplying all the partners. Lunch at noon will precede the play.

Chevy Chase.

Chevy Chase golfers will be busy with a continuation of their spring tournament card today, the men starting play in the Treasurer's Cup, a four-ball handicap match play best ball event. As no qualification round is required the entrants will swing into the match play rounds today.

Qualifying in the French High Commission Cup is on tap for the women members, with play starting this morning at 9:30 a. m. The sixteen low net scores will qualify for match play rounds starting Thursday.

Scott Fights Yucatan Kid

Richmond, Va., May 15 (AP).—The Yucatan Kid, Mexican lightweight fighting out of Miami, Fla., headlines Promoter Jay J. Thomas' boxing show here tomorrow night at the City Auditorium when he meets the hard-punching cowboy, Howard Scott, of Washington, over the 10-round route.

The Kid, in his last start here two weeks ago, had no trouble at all in taking the measure of the clever Joey Straiges, Camden, N. J., boxer, having the New Jersey boy on the floor several times.

The supporting card matches Joey Spangler, Richmond welterweight, with Woody Boord, of Pittsburgh, Pa. These two boxers, in the eight-round semi-final spot, resume hostilities begun last September when they fought to a bloody draw.

'Gee, if This Bag Was Only Lou Gevinson Himself!'

That's what Petey Sarron, former featherweight champion of the world, seemed to be saying yesterday as he tore into the heavy bag at the Huron gym. Petey's training for an engagement at Griffith Stadium Thursday night with Lou Gevinson, the Southwest contender for lightweight honors.

Sarron and Gevinson Plan Old-Fashioned Brawl Here

Both Decide Against 'Scientific' Fight at Stadium May 26; Scalzo on Card.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Mr. Pete Sarron intends to step right up and take his licks Thursday night at the ball park when he goes to bat against Lou Gevinson. He said so yesterday while vigorously applying a heavy turkish towel to his damp features. He had just finished his last bti of heavy training before the fight, and looked ready for the test.

We had gone around to see Mr. Sarron and his manager, Jimmy Erwin, thinking that they had, perhaps, gone into a huddle and figured out a plan of battle designed to catch the opposition off guard. But no, the Syrian will stick to his hittin' and leave the fancy ring work to Gevinson.

"Maybe," we suggested, "you have studied Gevinson's style, discovered a flaw or two in his armament, and planned an attack to take full advantage of same?"

"We've got him figured out all right," Erwin said. "I'm going to send Sarron out to hit him on the kisser, step back and let him drop. I don't want my man hurt by any falling timber," he added with a sly grin.

"Yeah," Sarron agreed, thoughtfully dabbing the huge towel at an ear. "His style of fighting is right down my alley, and I don't expect to have trouble with him. "I can't see any reason for changing my own style or making special plans for the fight."

"Then you're going to walk out and start swinging?" we asked.

"That's it exactly," said Erwin. "Gevinson's been belted out before —and by a second rater, at that, so I guess it can happen again."

"Well, you've seen me fight, haven't you?" Sarron asked, coming from behind a broad expanse of towel. We had. "Well," he continued, "I'm going to fight like I've always fought. What I mean is, I'm going to adapt myself to conditions as they arise. If he comes after me, I'll counter-punch, and if he lays back, I'll go in after him. I'm not going to let him alone. He's a flat-footed puncher. Off balance he couldn't bust a soap bubble, so I'll have him off balance so much he'll look like a baby taking its first step."

"Gevinson's a pretty stiff puncher with either hand," we ventured. "He hurts when he hits."

"That's where you're wrong," Erwin interrupted. "He hurts only when set to throw a punch. He won't hurt Pete with a right hand, and he's not going to land any lefts."

"I don't figure to get in the way of a left," Pete resumed pulling on a sock. "I've fought enough southpaws to know my way around with one, especially a green kid like Gevinson. I don't think he's going to get close with that left."

"What do you think is gonna happen when Sarron starts throwing 'em from all angles," Erwin inquired, packing training equipment in a battered, weather-beaten bag. "He's never faced a fighter before who stands up, falls into a crouch, and keeps banging away from every position. Personally, I think he'll blow up right there in the stadium—it's gonna flabbergast him, that's it, flabbergast him."

"I don't know about that," Sarron grinned adjusting his necktie, "But I do know I'm not gonna loaf when the bell rings. I'm gonna keep busy every minute and keep punching. That's the best way to win a fight I know of."

He has something there.

Gevinson's training rituals were conducted at high noon at the National Guard Armory where we put the same question to Lou and his agent, Matt Twomey.

"The only plans we're making," Twomey informed us, "are to land with that left. My boy's in the best shape of his career, punching better than ever, and itching to fight. If this Sarron will only fight him and not run away, this town's going to see the greatest bout in its history.

"I've seen Sraron fight, not once but eight times. Eight times," he repeated, spreading eight fingers before our eyes for emphasis. "And I know he don't like it in the body, and that he don't hit hard enough to hurt my boy. Two and two makes four, doesn't it? That guy can throw all the leather he wants, but he's just going to make himself tired. Gevinson's going to knock 'im out. Mark my words, he'll do it."

Maybe he will. Maybe Sarron will. It's kind of hard to figure—what do you think?

Pete Scalzo, a protege of Pete Reilly, the "old fox" of boxing, has been added to Thursday night's card, the matchmaker announced last night. Scalzo will meet George Carlo in a "six-round added attraction."

The matchmaker said that Scalzo has won 29 out of his last 30 fights. The defeat was a split decision suffered at the hands of Mike Belloise.

Steve Mamakos and Battling Burroughs fight in the 8-round semifinal event. Mamakos is a stablemate of Gevinson and Burroughs is a stablemate of Petey Sarron.

Two more fights will be added to the program this week, Goldie Ahearn said.

A Winning Jump for Maryland

Ed Miller, of the University of Maryland, is shown as he won the high jump for the Terps in the meet with Army at West Point Saturday. Miller was pegged at six feet for this jump. The Cadets won the meet, largely on points garnered from second and third places.

Cliff Dwellers Defeat Greenbelt Nine Foes

After Mayor Lewis Bessemer had pitched out the first ball with Community Manager Roy A. Braden receiving, to dedicate the new athletic field at Greenbelt, the Cliff Dwellers nine went to work and walloped the Rum Row team, 22-7, in a loosely played tussle yesterday.

Nessner had a homer and two doubles to lead the winners at bat. Taylor, a teammate slammed out three hits to aid Nessner. Baughman and Stewart drove in two runs apiece to feature the loser's hitting attack. Barker was the winning pitcher.

D.C. Tossers Will Enter Pro League

Heurich Has Applied for American Franchise Is Report.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, May 15.—The appearance of Washington in the American Basketball League circuit next season may be a development of the annual organization meeting slated for New York, Tuesday, May 24, it was learned today. Applications for franchises in the league are to be filed by Montreal, Boston, Washington, Harrisburg, Newark, Philadelphia, New York, Troy and Jamaica Long Island, groups besides the six present members of the league, the Jersey Reds, Philadelphia Spahs, Kate Smith Celtics, Brooklyn Visitations and Kingston Colonials.

John J. O'Brien president of the league also has received applications for memberships from cities in the Middle West, bringing the possibility of establishing a Western division for the first time since 1931. The granting of new franchises will depend almost entirely, O'Brien announced on the caliber of players signed by the applicants.

Chris Heurich, jr., owner of the Heurich Brewers professional basketball team, last night denied reports from New York that he would apply for franchise in the American League next season.

Heurich said that such a move had been discussed but that it was illogical and entirely out of the question because his players, dependent on other means of support, would be unable to travel constantly as the league schedule necessitates.

Heurich continued to say that the building of the new indoor stadium which is to give Washington an adequate basketball plant for the first time in history had probably given rise to the rumors from the Gotham.

Black Senators Win Loop Debut

The Washington Black Senators won their opening game of the Negro National League baseball season yesterday at Griffith Stadium, defeating the Buffalo Bisons by a margin of 11-9. The contest, a free-hitting one, was played under adverse weather conditions and before a crowd of approximately 800, who braved the chill and rain and held on to the end.

Judge Armond W. Scott, of the Municipal Court, tossed out the first ball.

Harry Spearman, Senator third baseman, led the attack which spelled the doom of the invaders. Spearman gathered four hits in five trips plateward, one of which was a home run into the leftfield bleachers.

The Senators play hosts to the strong New York Black Yankees next Saturday and Sunday.

Wins Family Pin Title.

Cumberland, Md., May 15.—Spilling 790 sticks in the last five games of a ten-game match last night after topping 901 maples Monday night, Paul Cioni defeated Brothers Harry and "Buck" to retain the Cioni family bowling championship. Paul had a ten-game total of 1,691, "Buck" was second with 1,556, and Harry last with 1,551.

Tight Pitching Marks Sandlot Third Round

By Perry Wilkinson.

The third-round play of the American Legion Junior Baseball League sports card saw Sergeant Jasper Post win a hot game from the Agriculture Post, 4-3, in a seven-inning battle played on the west Ellipse diamond yesterday.

Both clubs scored a brace of runs in the first frame, but the Jaspers, behind the hitting of Mandis, shoved across two more in the third to clinch victory. Baker, with three hits, led the losers at bat.

In other legion games, Fort Stevens, with Marcelino hurling 3-hit ball, downed Costello Post, 8-0; Nash defeated Pepco, 7-4, and the Cooley McCullough nine, with Joe Louis fanning ten and allowing but four hits, nosed out the Police Post team, 5-3.

In the only National City League game, Pirates A. C. won its third consecutive victory and marched to the top in League B by trouncing Anacostia Motors, 5-0, on the No. 2 Fairlawn field. Selinsky led the Pirate attack with three hits while Boetler and Stant were best for the losers.

By slamming out 17 safe blows, the Rock Creek Ginger Ale team won its fourth straight, 14-10, over the Lorton Blues. Yates homered for the wnining team while Fitzpatrick duplicated the feat for the losers. In other Independent League scraps, Takoma Tigers, with Buckner fanning 13 and R. Easton tripling with the bases loaded, set down the Texas Tavern nine, 7-4.

George Six twirled 3-hit ball to give the Foggleman team its second straight win over the Southeast Business Men nine, 6-2. A homer by L. Dodson was the telling blow in the 9-3 win of the Arlington Eagles over Interstate Commerce. The Kensington Athletic Club crew defeated the Southern Maryland Democratic Club, 7-4, on the Shady Oak diamond to round out the sandlot program.

Allegany High Beats Beall by 4-3 Count

Cumberland, Md., May 15.—Allowing five hits and striking out 14, Bill Spangler hurled the Allegany High School diamond combination to a 4-3 decision over Beall High of Frostburg here for the Campers' second victory in as many days and their third triumph in a row.

Singles in the fifth by Spangler, Charles Krietzburg and Jack Cowherd, coupled with a stolen base, gave Allegany two runs and the game. Spangler retired the side on strikes in the fourth and six frames. The longest blow of the game was Layman's triple for the visitors.

California Golfer Hits Brassie Shot Into Man's Pocket

Del Monte, Calif., May 15 (AP). A brassie shot by Carl Fricki, of Altadena today landed in the pocket of H. P. Eastman, of San Gabriel.

Eastman said later he felt a slight blow but had no idea it was caused by a flying golf ball.

Peter Hay, Del Monte professional, ruled the ball should be dropped where Eastman felt the blow.

The unusual shot was made on the approach to the eighteenth green, within sight of several other golfers.

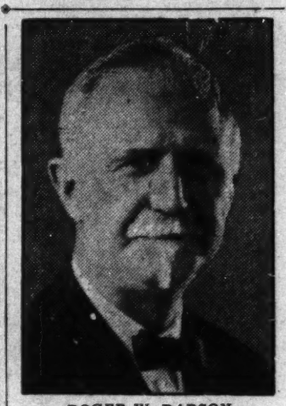
Tax on New Government Bonds A Proposal Indorsed by Babson

With Lighter Capital Gains Levy the Two Steps, He Says, Would Help to End the Nine-Month Strike of Capital.

By Roger W. Babson.

Babson Park, Mass., May 15.—Cutting out tax-exemption on new public bonds and softening the capital gains tax would be the biggest immediate help which Congress could give the country now. It would aid in bringing an end to the strike of capital which started last August. Taxing new Government bonds and easing the levy on capital gains should force billions of dollars into new enterprises. These two steps are more important to recovery than the appropriation of the new $5,000,000,000 spending program.



ROGER W. BABSON.

Basically, taxes should be limited to raising money to pay public expenses. The soundest way to do this is to abandon all present Federal levies except estate taxes and a broad income tax and to rely thereon. Present revenue measures are like a Chinese puzzle to figure out. They are unwise and restrictive. The framers of the newer tax statutes had no idea what their ultimate effect would be. They did not realize, for instance, that a higher levy on personal holding companies, coupled with John L. Lewis' activities, would be largely responsible for throwing 4,000,000 people out of work between last August and this May.

What Higher Tax Did.

Personal holding companies formerly held a tax advantage for wealthy individuals. Dividends and interest from investments could accumulate in these holding company treasuries by paying a flat corporation income tax of around 15 per cent. But if the dividends were paid direct they had to be put through the owner's personal tax return at rates up to as high as 75 per cent. For several years Treasury experts had tried to stop this "leak," but up until 1937 it was still cheaper to use the holding company device. Finally, last August, a bill was pushed through Congress which hiked the tax rate on these companies to 80 or 90 per cent. Immediately their owners began to sell their stockholdings and replace them with tax-free Government bonds.

Under the three-year rule of the Securities Exchange Commission the stock market had become very "thin." Prices often changed faster in a day than they fluctuated in a week ten years before. Hence, the market was unable to obsorb these big blocks of securities which the holding companies wanted to get rid of. Prices naturally began to sink. Then high margins brought on selling from other sources. One forced sale would uncover another stop-loss order. Within a month what began as an orderly retreat had turned into a rout. For the first time in my experience a stock-market crash brought on a business decline rather than a business decline bringing on a stock-market crash!

Bad Business.

The drafters of last August's increase in personal holding company taxes little dreamed that it would touch off one of the sharpest recessions in history. The experience is a vivid illustration of the danger of tampering with our economic machinery. It shows the dynamite in using the tax power as a reform club. Business is like a watch. You cannot take off one wheel to repair it and expect the other wheels to keep good time. Our crazy-quilt tax system is the biggest problem we face today. Unemployment, crops, labor strife, spending and all our other worries are "junior" to it.

We are now wallowing in a stupid recession. Yet ours is the greatest and richest nation in the world. Gigantic mineral and farm wealth, unlimited factory and machine equipment, and unprecedented credit reservoirs are ours. What has gone wrong? My answer is that those who control the wealth and industry of the Nation have joined labor and consumers in a strike! These capitalists refuse to risk their money (and every business deal is a risk) unless they can make, and retain, a fair profit. They feel that the Administration has "stacked the deck" so they have gone on a "sit-down" of their own!

Add this capital strike to renewed labor troubles, plus the consumer "sit-down," and we have business stagnation. The new Roosevelt spending program has been given a cold and clammy reception. In 1932 and '33 we needed pump-priming. We needed to inflate the business balloon and get it off the ground. But we do not need inflating or priming today. What we need now is a little assurance that the "heads-I-win, tails-you-lose" game is over. Banks do not need bolstering; utilities do not need new money; labor does not need higher wages, but capital does need to be put to work.

A lower capital gains levy and the taxing of new public bonds could change the entire picture. They would drive hoarded and "dead" money into new enterprises and new industries. They could end the present business "standstill." Eliminating tax exemption on new bonds, however, means that public borrowing would cost the taxpayer more money through higher interest rates. Hence, the passage of a modified tax on capital gains must be a running mate of any measure eliminating tax-exempt bonds. In other words, force capital to work, on the one hand, by ending tax exemption; encourage it to work, on the other, by lowering the tax on capital gains.

Emergency Measures.

If we expect owners of capital to launch new industries we must assure them that if they are successful the Government will not take 85 per cent of their profits. That is just plain horse sense. The great hope of America is new industries. Our wonderful standard of living has come because of the development of new industries. These proposed changes in our restrictive and unwise tax system would be a powerful stimulus to new industries and to prosperity. They should be pushed through this session of Congress as emergency measures. Then the pump will need no priming!

$5,945,944 Loss For Rio Grande

New York, May 15 (AP).—A net deficit of $5,945,944 in 1937 for the Denver & Rio Grande Western Railroad largely was traced today by Trustees Wilson McCarthy and Henry Swan to increasing costs of operation.

In the annual pamphlet report the trustees pointed out that if the wage scales, coal costs, prices of materials and supplies and taxes for 1937 had been on the same basis as 1933, the net operating income of the road for the past year would have been increased by $4,122,200. The 1936 net deficit totaled $4,046,440.

National Power & Light.

National Power & Light Co., an affiliate of the Electric Bond & Share system of holding companies, reported today a net income of $4,991,976 for the year 1937, compared with $4,968,257 the previous year. This was equal, in both years to slightly more than 60 cents a share on the common stock after provision for preferred dividends.

Railway Crisis Halts Recovery, Col. Ayres Says

Sees No General Expansion Since Announcement of Pump-Priming.

Cleveland, Ohio, May 15.—"There has been no general expansion of business activity since the announcement of the pump-priming program a month ago," says Col. Leonard P. Ayres in the business bulletin of the Cleveland Trust Co. to be released tomorrow. He adds:

"When the announcement was made stock prices advanced moderately and they have since held most of their small gains. The quotations for Federal securities moved upward, and that advance has been held. The outstanding characteristics of the renewed depression are still the same as they have been since the beginning of the year. They are an abnormally small demand for new automobiles, exceptionally low outputs in the basic iron and steel industry, greatly reduced volumes of freight traffic on the raliroads, and steadily increasing unemployment.

"Perhaps the most serious defect in the recovery program is that it entirely overlooks the crisis conditions that have developed in the railroad industry. Probably it is not possible to get a robust and durable recovery under way without first taking resolute steps to restore the solvency of the railroads. Those great corporations constitute a really large fraction of our entire business economy.

"At present the total market values of all railroad shares are much less than they were at the bottom of the depression in 1932 and 1933, and they are only about one-fourth as much as they were in the years just before the depression. The prices of the utility stocks are similarly depressed, although the industry is not in any such critical condition as that of the railroads. Utility stocks are now selling at much lower levels than those of 1932 and 1933, and at prices only about one-fifth as high as those of 1929.

"We know from the experiences of the past depression years that not even lavish and long continued public spending will either restore railroad traffic or create public confidence in utility investments. The attempt to carry through a recovery program without taking steps to restore confidence in railroad and utility investments is a little like undertaking to operate an automobile without repairing its one punctured tire. The analogy is not closely applicable, but it is still true that attempts at managed recoveries are likely to prove disappointing if their programs disregard important sections of the depression areas."

Bob Burns Says—

I think one of the most unfair criticisms of the younger generation is when people blame 'em for not bein' domestic. I think the whole fault belongs to the mothers.

I know one young wife who kept takin' her husband's clothes to the tailor to be repaired. Finally the tailor asked her why she brought her husband's clothes in to him when there was never anything wrong except a couple of buttons off.

The young wife says, "well, my husband married so young, he never learned to sew on a button."

A. F. L. Refuses To Work With U. S. Chamber

Green Holds 'Reactionary' Principles Not Those of All Businessmen.

Efforts to bring about a new spirit of co-operation between the American Federation of Labor and the Chamber of Commerce of the United States were revealed yesterday to have failed. The statement of principles adopted by the chamber at its annual meeting 10 days ago, following conciliation efforts by members of both factions, has been rejected by the American Federation of Labor as too "reactionary."

William Green, president of the Federation, yesterday said, however, there still was opportunity for co-operation with industrial management.

"I don't think the chamber's official platform is a reflection of the views of all businessmen of the country," he said. "I think there are forces among progressive businessmen which will afford a basis for agreement."

He disagreed with the chamber in its call for revision of the Wagner labor relations act, explaining that the federation's fight was on the administration of the act by the National Labor Relations Board. The American Federation of Labor has long maintained that board members are biased in favor of the Committee for Industrial Organization as against the American Federation of Labor.

Labor, meanwhile, is looking to the Supreme Court today for several decisions affecting its status.

Expected is a ruling that will decide whether workers who strike thereby remove themselves from protection of the Wagner act. The Mackay Radio and Telegraph Co. was upheld in the Circuit Court of Appeals in its contention that workers do lose such protection, and the case has been appealed by the Labor Board.

Also possible today is a ruling on the Government's plea for a writ of mandamus asked for in the Labor Board's effort to withdraw from the Third Circuit Court a decision against the Republic Steel Co. The board seeks to alter procedure in the case to comply with the Supreme Court's recent decision in the Kansas City stockyards fee case, but the company has opposed the withdrawal and was upheld by the circuit tribunal.

The A. F. of L. attitude toward the national Chamber of Commerce was given in its weekly news service, which said:

"The Chamber of Commerce adopted an ambiguous resolution saying that 'management and labor should work together without recourse to the Federal Government' on certain things of 'common concern.' Another resolution opposed any Federal wage and hour legislation, and to climax its record the chamber advocated repeal of the national labor relations act, which, even though it is being badly administered, guarantees the right of workers to bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing, and whose retention as a Federal law is one of the demands of the American Federation of Labor.

"There was no mention of organized labor, no mention of trade unionism, no mention of collective bargaining, no condemnation of company unions, labor spies strike-breaking thugs, or tear gas and other forms of terrorism by private police in labor disputes . . .

"Nearly 4,000,000 members of unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor are employed by thousands of progressive business men who have long since recognized that organized labor on a nation-wide scale is here to stay and who have found that trade unions based on agreements democratically negotiated and faithfully observed can be of great assistance in working out industry's problems."

Mrs. Culbertson on Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson

The Culbertson System of Five-Suit Bridge.

FOREWORD.

(Let it be thoroughly understood that five-suit bridge is in no sense supplanting contract bridge. However, I have received hundreds of requests for bidding and playing advice at the new game, and, in response, shall present the salient features of the Culbertson System that has been devised especially for this game.)

Bidding for the Widow.

It is vital to distinguish between the honor value and the distributional value of the widow card. During the bidding the widow may be mentally included in either partner's hand, for the purpose of completing honor-trick requirements of an opening bid, or for the purpose of adding to the length of any four-card (but never three-card), or longer suit, under the following conditions:

(a) If the widow card is a jack or higher, the player who makes the first bid for his side is deemed to have included the widow in his hand and bid. (b) If the widow is lower than a jack, it is mentally included in the bid of the partner who is first to mention the suit of which the widow is a part. (c) When the widow is neither an honor, nor a low card of a bid suit, it is not definitely included in the bid of either partner. Its value remains problematical. (d) Although the honor value of the widow card is taken by the first bidder of a partnership, the distributional value may be taken by the player who bids the suit to which the widow belongs. Thus, suppose the widow is the spade king. North opens the bidding with one eagle and South responds with two spades. The mutual assumption is that North took the one-half honor-trick value of the king in the widow, and that South took the playing value of a spade into his own bid.

Opening Suit Bids.

Requirements—3½ honor-tricks with a four-card biddable suit; 3 honor-tricks with a rebiddable five-card, or longer, suit; 2½ honor-tricks with ten cards in two suits (5-5, 6-4, etc.). A weak opening no-trump bid, based on 3-plus to 4 honor-tricks, is advocated because of its value as a shutout bid. (Fourth hand no-trumps require 4 to 5 honor-tricks.)

(See Wednesday's column for more about the Culbertson System of five-suit bridge.)

Today's Five-Suit Hand.

	♠ E K Q 7 5 ♥ Q 10 7 5 ♡ A 8 7 ◇ 10 6 ♣ K J 4
♠ E 8 3 2 ♥ 9 2 ♡ Q J 3 2 ◇ Q J 9 8 ♣ A 8 6	North West East South.	♠ E A 9 6 ♥ 6 3 ♡ 9 5 ◇ A K 7 5 ! ♣ 10 9 3 2
	♠ E 10 4 ♥ A K J 8 4 ♡ K 10 6 4 ◇ 5 4 ♣ Q 7 5

Widow: E J

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
4 ♠	Pass	5 ♣	Pass
Pass	Pass

This hand offers a simple illustration of the proper disposition of the widow card. Declarer opens the diamond card. Declarer should put the eagle jack into the dummy where it forms an excellent five-card suit, and should discard the diamond six, thus reducing his diamond losers to one trick. Now, regardless of the defense, declarer gets dummy's eagle suit established before the defenders can set up a heart trick and, thus, declarer holds his own loss to one diamond and one club, the six and four of hearts in declarer's hand finding a comfortable resting spot on dummy's established eagle suit.

Slain Man Called 'A Double-Crosser'

Harrison, Mich., May 15 (AP).—William Livingstone, 41, jailed in connection with the barroom shooting last night of Isaiah Leebove, 41, oil promoter and former "mystery man" of Michigan politics, reiterated today his charge of "doublecross" against his former associate.

The shooting wounded Byron Geller, former assistant attorney general of Michigan and recently associated with the slain man in the oil business. Geller's condition was said to be "satisfactory" today.

D. C. LIMITS PARKING ALONG 43 STREETS

Motorists Lose Thousands of Places for Machines; City Lots Seem Doomed

By WILLIAM E. RING

Parking worries of Washington motorists multiplied with rapidity today as the District Commissioners legislated out of existence hundreds of curbside parking spaces.

The city fathers adopted recommendations of Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer, which listed 43 streets throughout the city, where new anti-parking restrictions are to be enforced, and established six new one-way streets.

BANS TO THE RIGHT OF YOU!

BANS TO THE LEFT OF YOU!

"No Parking Here!"—"No Parking Now!"—it's enough to exasperate a saint! 43 more streets marked against you—hydrants and driveways galore, and always another car in the place you'd spotted!

BUT, Mr. Citizen, THERE IS NO PARKING LIMIT AT THE HECHT CO. between the hours of 9:30 to 5:45. Now you may park your car with speed, convenience, safety and in our great new Parking Building . . . conveniently located right at the rear of the store—in the heart of downtown Washington!
